HALLELUJAH! ALCOHOLIC MILK

By JOE JOYCE
The Guardian

DUBLIN — It sounds like an old alchemist's dream come true. Millions of gallons of milk are being transformed into gin and vodka by a cheese factory in Ireland and distilleries in Britain.

Carbery Milk Products is now producing 3,000 gallons a day of 169 proof alcohol at its plant near Bandon, County Cork. It sells it all to distilleries and pharmaceutical companies in Britain.

Dairy scientists have known how to produce alcohol from milk for a long time, but the Carbery plant is the first in the world to turn it into a commercial reality.

The process, however, offers little scope to amateur distillers equipped with a few pints of milk. Huge quantities of milk and sophisticated equipment are needed for the transformation.

The alcohol comes from whey, the liquid mixture of cream, protein and lactose left over after making cheese. The Carbery factory uses equipment similar to kidney machines to extract the protein and then ferments the lactose to produce alcohol.

Bernie Cahill, the firm's managing director, said that the alcohol can be used in any spirits, like gin and vodka, which can be made from molasses.

Clocks Go Back

Daylight saving time officially ends at 2 a.m. local time Sunday and everybody should turn their clock back one hour before they go to bed Saturday night.

"Spring forward, fall back," is the catch-phrase some people use to remember the right way to reset their clocks.

Dow Rout Total

By JACK EGAN
Washington Post

NEW YORK — The stock-market finished the week in a total rout, continuing the broadest extended decline that analysts can remember.

Friday's drop of 15.07 in the Dow Jones Industrial Average put the week's loss at 31.96 points to close at 806.05.

For the last two weeks, the decline totals 91.04 points, or a retreat of more than 10 per cent.

"People are taking out their record books to see if there is anything worse in such a short period of time, and it's hard to find anything," said Newton Zider, vice president for market research at E.F. Hutton. "To have two weeks back to back like this is probably unprecedented."

While the declining 30 Dow Industrials has been demoralizing, they have outperformed the rest of the market, which has seen about 10 times as many stocks dropping as advance.

Friday, on a turnover of 39.4 million shares, only 175 issues gained on the New York Stock Exchange while 1,480 stocks declined.

The market has been dogged with worries over the plunging dollar, rising inflation and surging interest rates for the last two weeks.

But analysts are attributing the continued descent in stock prices — with only one advance in the last 10 sessions — to technical factors more than to the sour news background.

The severe damage to the so-called secondary stocks, or companies with smaller capitalizations, is apparently continuing because customers who bought the shares on debt are getting margin calls from their brokers. And instead of putting up extra money, they are selling out their positions, adding to the downward pressure on prices.

TALKS COLLAPSE

Strike Closes B.C. Railway

VANCOUVER (CP) — No trains were running on the government-owned British Columbia Railway after the collapse today of marathon contract negotiations aimed at ending a strike which began Friday night.

Union members set up picket lines at stations along the line Friday evening, but both sides continued negotiations until 5:30 a.m. PDT when negotiators for the joint council of railway unions rejected an average 8.64-per-cent wage increase.

No further talks have been scheduled.

At the conclusion of the 20½-hour bargaining session, council chairman Norm Farley of the plumbers' union said the impasse is caused by "an unrealistic management."

Mac Norris, B.C. Rail chief executive officer, said the company is puzzled by the rejection.

Norris said that although the last offer was an average 8.64-per-cent increase in a one-year contract, "for over half the employees the offer was in excess of 12 per cent."

The 12 per cent was offered to Teamsters and the Canadian Union of Transportation Employees as a means of catching up to the other unions in the joint council.

Norris said money is the main stumbling block, and that management sees no problem with other issues.

He said the wage offer was tabled Wednesday, but the unions concentrated on settlement of other areas during discussions through the week.

Farley said the strike was called Friday evening with passing of a 48-hour union deadline set Wednesday when the company tabled two items the council felt should have been discussed at prior talks involving individual unions, rather that at the joint session.

"The council constitution written by the labor relations board says we're not empowered to deal with any items peculiar to any council constituents," Farley said. He would not disclose the issues or unions affected.

The joint council concept is being tested for the first time this year in an attempt to bring labor peace to the troubled railway. Less than a year ago, the provincial labor board wrote the constitution for the joint council.

The seven railway unions have been without a contract since July 31.

Labor Minister Allan Williams intervened in the dispite last week when it appeared the parties were deadlocked. He withdrew government mediator Fred Geddes from the bargaining, making a strike legal, but insisted that talks continue.

Geddes, working in an unofficial capacity, met separately with the two sides during negotiations Friday night.

Poison Water Threat

PENTICTON (CP) — Federal environment protection service (EPD) officers are investigating a leak of highly-toxic chemicals near a river channel flowing into two lakes which supply drinking water for this Okanagan city.

Peter Beulah, vice-president of Greenwood Forest Products Ltd., said Friday that an estimated 1.5 kilograms of liquid sodium pentachlorophenate, mixed 50 parts water to one part chemical, leaked from a holding tank which was filled earlier in the week.

The chemical is a form of pentachlorphenol (PCP) which has been linked to birth defects, cervical cancer and deaths.

Beulah said the leak was discovered Friday morning. He said use of the tank was halted and that it was being drained to determine the cause if the leak.

Lynda Gauthier, pollution control branch spokesman, said EPS had been asked to handle clean-up and investigation of the leak.

Otto Langer, EPS hazardous waste biologist, said even the diluted solution used by Greenwood — and many other forest products firms — could kill fish in neaby Skaha Lake if it travels that far.

"PCP is highly toxic to aquatic life and fairly persistent in the environment," he said.

"I didn't think of calling any health people or environment officials because I was too busy ordering the tank drained and I didn't think only 100 gallons of the stuff would be a danger," said Beulah.

Post Office Flashpoint Remains

Times News Services

The situation at post office flashpoint across Canada today with suspensions of Canadian Union of Postal Workers leaders in several centres and skirmishes between union members and people who worked during the week-long mail strike reported in Toronto.

Three shop stewards have been suspended indefinitely in Vancouver because of their actions during the week-long defiance of back-to-work legislation and, in Halifax, an undisclosed number of postal employees have been suspended "pending a recommendation for dismissal."

Buz Sawyer, post office spokesman in Victoria, said today there have been no confrontations nor suspensions involving CUPW members here.

He said the hard feelings generated by the week-long strike have given way to hard work.

"Everyone is doing his best to do the job."

Sawyer also took exception to reports supervisors were taunting CUPW members.

"I can assure you nothing of that kind is going on here. That would be a just plain dumb thing to do."

Lloyd Ingram, president of the CUPW's Vancouver local, said the union will "put on all the pressure we can" to stop further suspensions but he would not say what action would be taken.

Ingram said the three stewards could lose their jobs if they don't win planned grievances.

Post office spokesperson Betty Amos also said that delivery of summonses to 31 union members in the Vancouver area were held up after only three or four had been served.

The post office has been informed by the federal justice ministry that "there is a hold on any more summonses or prosecutions, not that they (current charges) are dropped," she said.

The 31 were charged in provincial court with defying return-to-work legislation after information was filed in court by post office supervisors.

Meanwhile, the 19,000 members of the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada who reported back to work Thurs-

A Real SIN, Says MP

OTTAWA (CP) — A Conservative MP said Friday the government is abusing the use of social insurance numbers and a cabinet minister answered he is suffering from paranoia.

Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon-Biggar) said in the Commons the government is violating undertakings of many years standing that it would use the numbers for only social services.

He said in an interview later this is an invasion of the privacy of individuals. He said individuals can become the victims of fraud if their numbers get widespread dissemination.

He likened the unlimited use of the number to George Orwell's 1984 in which the government kept close check on citizens.

And he said it has been said if Hitler had the information obtainable through unrestricted use of such numbers he could have murdered more Jews.

Hnatyshyn raised the matter in the Commons by asking Health and Welfare Minister about extension of the use of the number by provinces and the federal govedrnment to that of a glorified identification card.

Miss Begin said she does not understand the paranoia behind the question. She was responsible for a department with an annual budget of $14 billion. It was a vulnerable field, open to the danger of fraud. Use of the numbers by all governments in their computer programs provided a measure of control of use of the money.

"I don't intend to let people cheat on any penny of the money . . .I don't want any loss of control."

ICBC Strike Backed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Union members employed by the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia Friday voted 82 per cent to strike if necessary to get a new contract, spokesmen for the Office and Technical Employees Union said.

The last contract expired Sept. 30.

Major outstanding issues include wages and hours of work, the spokesmen said. ICBC has offered a general pay increase of five per cent to a maximum of $1,000 a year. The union wants 9.5 per cent, they said.

ICBC also has offered merit bonuses of up to $1,000 a year.

Carter Pulls Egyptians Back to Peace Table

Times News Services

Egypt today reversed its decision to recall its negotiators from Washington, giving the U.S.-backed peace conference a major new boost.

President Carter told a campaign rally in Buffalo, N.Y., he had phoned Egyptian President Anwar Sadat Friday and asked him to reconsider the move to summon home his principal two delegates to the talks.

"'I'll do what my friend Jimmy Carter asks me to,'" Carter quoted Sadat as replying. "They're going to stay there and negotiate."

Meanwhile, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan today rejected suggestions that peace talks with Egypt had reached a crisis stage.

The Egyptian decision to keep its negotiators in Washington came as the Carter administration worked to prevent a dispute over Israel's announced intention to expand settlements on the West Bank of the Jordan River from becoming an obstacle to completion of the peace treaty.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's cabinet revealed that intention Wednesday in a move that triggered a sharp public clash with the Carter administration.

Egypt, sensitive to concern in the Arab world about the future of the two areas, wants to strengthen the language linking the West Bank issue to an Eyptian-Israeli peace.

Israel, which contends that the two matters are separate, seeks to weaken the linkage language.

In the last 48 hours, U.S. officials have made little secret of how angry they are at Begin for making the settlements an issue at this stage of the talks.

As the talks were moving into a holding pattern, President Carter met with Saudi Arabia's King Khalid at a White House luncheon in an effort to win his backing for the peace drive launched at Camp David.

A statement issued afterward said Khalid appreciates Carter's peace efforts — indicating the king still is unwilling publicly to endorse the Arab-Israeli talks.

Britain Arms Zambia

LUSAKA (Reuter) — A British military transport plane carrying a first consignment of military equipment to shore up Zambia's defences flew in and out of Lusaka early today.

Informed sources said the operation was carried out amid tight security to avoid a possible Rhodesian attack or harassment.

No details of what the plane was carrying were immediately available. But the sources indicated that anti-aircraft guns were likely to be in the consignment.

More British military flights are expected during the weekend.

President Kenneth Kaunda first asked for British military assistance when he met Prime Minister James Callaghan last month in Kano, Nigeria.

Two teams of British military experts visited Zambia to assess the landlocked country's needs but the shipments were accelerated by last week's Rhodesian raids in Zambia.

$341M IN UIC

OTTAWA (CP) — The government paid out $341 million in unemployment benefits in August, bringing the total for the first eight months of 1978 to $3.3 billion, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

This is a 20 per cent increase from the same period during 1977.

Shoot 'em Down . . . Send 'em Bill

MOSCOW (WP) — The Soviet Union, which shot down a South Korean airliner last April after it strayed into Russian airspace, has charged the Koreans about $100,000 for humanitarian aid to the 108 passengers and crew who survived the high-altitude attack and crash landing.

The bill, prepared several months ago, charges South Korean Airlines for food, medical help and transportation for people and baggage from the remote frozen lake were the pilot of the stricken airliner managed to land after the plane was hit.

The Soviets refuse to diplomatically recognize South Korea and have sent the bill to Pan American World Airways, which has acted as general representative for the Korean company here. A Pan American spokesman refused to comment, but senior Soviet diplomatic sources confirmed that the bill had been sent and so far has not been paid.

Other sources said the Soviet authorities in their accounting "reserve the right for other charges not contemplated in the original bill."

One Western diplomatic source, informed of the soviet action, said, "they probably included the cost of the gas for the fighters and the machinegun bullets, too."

The Boeing 707 jetliner was intercepted by two Soviet fighters as it blundered on the night of April 20 over the strategic city of Murmansk, home port for the Soviet ballistic missile submarine fleet.

The fighters signaled the airliner to land, and when it ignored them, one interceptor fired on the plane with missiles after machinegun bullets were fired in warning across its nose. The attack, at 35,000 feet, punctured the passenger cabin with shrapnel, killing two and injuring 10. The 707 pilot, Kim Chang Kyu, headed the plane into a dive to prevent fatal decompression of the passenger compartment and subsequently landed about 30 miles west of the small Soviet city of Kem on the defence-studded Kola Peninsula.

Among the items listed by the Soviets were the cost of helicoptering the survivors from the wilderness landing site to Kem; three days of food and care there, where they were confined to a town community centre; bus rides to the city airport; and the flights of two Aeroflot jetliners from Kem to Murmansk with the passengers and baggage for eventual return to the West via a Pan Am 727, the clipper "West Berlin."

NON-SMOKER GETS COLDS FROM SMOKE

GENEVA (Reuter) — Non-smokers exposed to tobacco smoke — particularly children — suffer more colds and coughs, the World Health Organization (WHO) said Friday.

The conclusion is reached in a report approved by a WHO committee.

Sir George Godber, chairman of the WHO committee, said: "There will never be a healthy cigarette."

'I Know Fred Is Alive,' Says Pilot's Girl

Times News Services

MELBOURNE — The girlfriend of a pilot who vanished in his light plane after radioing he was being followed by a UFO says he was still alive but that details of his mysterious disappearance were "top secret."

"I know Fred is alive. We will see him soon," said 16-year-old Rhonda Rushton.

She said she had met with Transport Department officials concerning the disappearance of Frederick Valentich, 20.

"We all know Fred is alive and we have told the authorities this, but it is still all top secret now," Rushton said. "I will not be saying any more about this."

A department spokesman said, "We assured her we would keep details of the interview confidential and we must abide by that condition."

The department's Air Safety Investigation branch has begun inquiring into all aspects of the aircraft's last flight.

Meanwhile, in Clarenville, Nfld., it has been reported that an RCMP officer sat and watched an unidentified flying object for more than an hour earlier this week.

The name of the officer who saw the object was not released.

Inquiry to See 4 Documents

OTTAWA (CP) — A possible confrontation over the question of who decides whether the McDonald Royal Commission into RCMP wrongdoing should see secret government papers was narrowly averted Friday when the government announced it would release four disputed documents.

But Prime Minister Trudeau still insisted he does not intend to permit commission members to examine confidential cabinet documents.

The question arose during the commission's hearings Thursday when the lawyer for retired RCMP commissioner W.L. Higgit, tried to introduce four cabinet documents before the proceedings. Government lawyers refused to allow the commission to see the documents.

Mr. Justice David C. McDonald, the commission chairman, questioned the lawyers' right to withold the documents from the commission.

The documents all came from RCMP files.

Trudeau said Friday the commission would not be given free access to cabinet documents but promised he would release any document showing Cabinet ministers knew mounties were breaking the law.

Then Justice Minister Otto Lang announced the commission would be allowed to examine the four documents introduced by RCMP lawyer Pierre Lamontagne.

Lang told a press conference that, before 1972, it was practice to give copies of some cabinet documents to the RCMP. This practice ended in 1972.

He said the government lawyers were not aware of that practice Thursday.

While the government has given the go-ahead for the release of the documents to the commission, Lang said it will be up to the commissioners whether they will become public.

But he did not say the government's lawyers would not argue against this.

Argument on this point is scheduled to be heard Tuesday morning when the commission resumes its public hearings.

Lang, who said he had not seen all of the four documents, said they did not contain any evidence of impropriety.

Mac-Blo Profits Double

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel declared a special end-of-year dividend Friday of 25 cents a common share, in addition to a regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share, up from 20 cents last quarter, also declared Friday.

The dividends reflect the strong nine-month performance of the company which recorded a profit of $72.9 million or $3.25 a share compared to $37.9 million or $1.69 a share for the corresponding period last year.

The profit last year was reduced by a third-quarter provision for a $22 million write-off of the company's investment in La Cellulose d'Aquitaine, S.A., a French pulp producer.

The dividends are payable Dec. 15 for shareholders of record Nov. 22.

Extortion Try Foiled

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two young men stood in shocked disbelief Friday as 12 police cars and 10 media vehicles surrounded them in the wake of a bungled extortion attempt.

Police engineered a ransom drop, the drop having been demanded earlier when a bank manager received a recorded telephone threat against his family. The family was safe at home.

The activities of two suspects were observed for more than two hours by police and reporters with police radios. They were watched walking near the drop site and looking at the envelope which had been laid at the base of a telephone pole.

Police were concerned about the presence of several CBC television vehicles which display the CBC logo. The drivers were repeatedly told to keep their distance; and, at one point, a driver was threatened with arrest for fear he would jeopardize the operation.

When the suspects finally picked up the envelope, police and the other vehicles roared to the scene.

No charges were laid Friday night but the suspects remained in custody.

Map valid until noon Sunday

Weather conditions in British Columbia are deteriorating. An onshore flow of cold moist air has resulted in increased cloudiness and showers in coastal areas. The moist air will push southeastward today to spread cloudiness through the interior giving snowflurries to the northern half and a few showers to the south. A ridge of high pressure building into western British Columbia Sunday will be too weak to give any significant clearing to the province.

CADILLAC, Mich. (AP) — The longest trial in Michigan history has come to an end with the dismissal of all claims in a $250,000 lawsuit against the firms blamed for one of the worst agricultural disasters in U.S. history.

Circuit Judge William Peterson, in issuing a 155-page opinion based on more than 14 months of testimony, ruled Friday that the chemical PBB is not harmful in small quantities.

Peterson dismissed a suit filed by Roy and Marilyn Tacoma, of Falmouth, Mich., who had to shoot 115 of their dairy cattle in July 1976 because, they said, the animals became worthless as a result of PBB contamination.

Peterson ordered the Tacomas to pay all court costs, which one lawyer estimated ran to $10,000 a day.

The suit contended that Michigan Chemical Co., which made the PBB — or polybrominated biphenyl — Michigan Farm Bureau Services, whose feed was contaminated by the chemical, and the Falmouth Co-op knowingly sold the tainted product and conspired to cover it up.

The Tacomas, who sought triple punitive damages, said in their suit that they shot the cows so that they wouldn't have to sell them.

But the judge wrote: "Plaintiffs have failed to prove the keystone of their claim: that their animals were injured by PBB." He said months of scientific testimony did not convince him the chemical was harmful in small quantities.

Tacoma said late Friday that he had not yet finished reading the judge's ruling, but added that he was "shocked."

It was the longest trial in Michigan history, and the first involving claims of damage from PBB, the toxic fire retardant accidentally mixed with cattle feed and distributed around the state in 1973.

The disaster led to destruction of more than 35,000 cattle and other animals, 1.5 million eggs, hundreds of thousands of poultry animals and tons of milk and butter.

The judge said he gave both sides great leeway to offer testimony and documentary evidence in the trial, which ended last May. However, he was highly critical of much of the scientific testimony presented.

Peterson also assailed the Tacomas' efforts to prove their farm had suffered lower milk production, unusual cattle and calf deaths and soaring veterinary costs because of PBB.

"Among the things that this case is not," he wrote, "it is not a case of an enterprise ruined by PBB."

Michigan Chemical Co. and Michigan Farm Bureau Services have paid almost $40 million to settle more than 600 out-of-court claims. Still pending are more than 200 claims, including more than 100 suits.

Lawyers on both sides refused comment Friday because the judge had asked that word of his opinion be withheld until Monday.

$1B Suit Hits Asbestos Firms

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A $1 billion class-action lawsuit, filed on behalf of 5,000 shipyard workers, accuses the 15 major asbestos manufacturers with conspiracy to conceal and distort reports on the health dangers of asbestos.

There have been more than 1,000 asbestos-related lawsuits filed nationwide, but Friday's Los Angeles Superior Court action is believed to be the largest in scope yet filed.

The suit asks for general and punitive damages and for medical expenses and loss of earnings on behalf of each injured worker.

"Asbestos was and is an extremely hazardous substance and was and is unsafe and defective when used in the construction, repair and maintenance of seagoing vessels by workers at Todd Pacific Shipyard in San Pedro and the Long Beach Naval Shipyard," the suit contends.

When breathed, the tiny asbestos particles cause severe, disabling and deadly conditions of the lungs and respiratory problems including lung cancer, the suit said.

The suit said the defendant companies caused the workers and their employers to be deprived of knowledge and information of the material's dangerous nature. As a result the companies "did not take those measures necessary for the protection of the health and lives of plaintiffs."

Additionally, the suit contends the defendants "have been unjustly enriched by the profits of their continued manufacture and sale of asbestos during the period of their concealment of the facts (1938 to present)."

Thus, the suit says, the companies "are indebted" to the injured workers in the amount of their profits since that time — about $1 billion.

Lawyers for the plaintiffs said they believed this was the first time in an asbestos-related lawsuit that workers had asked for restitution of profits, a legal remedy that generally is confined to one aggrieved businessman suing another businessman.

Defendants in the suit are Johns-Manville; Raybestos-Manhattan Inc.; Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp.; Celotex; Philip Carey Corp.; Eagle-Picher Industries, Inc.; Pittsburg-Corning Corp.; Unarco Industries, Inc.; Combustion Engineering, Inc.; Standard Asbestos Manufacturing & Insulating Co.; Ruberoid Co.; Keene Corp.; Armstrong Cork Co.; H.K. Porter and Amotex.

GROMYKO SCORNFUL

PARIS (Reuter) — Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko of the Soviet Union said today the award of the Nobel Peace Prize to President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel seems like a joke.

Gromyko told a news conference just before leaving for Moscow after a three-day visit to France: "Frankly, this seems like some kind of joke. I know that not everyone shares my point of view, but I am speaking to you frankly."

He did not elaborate.

25% Jump In Fuel Cost Fires Israeli Inflation

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israelis were hit by increases of up to 25 per cent in the cost of fuel Friday and the increases seemed likely to boost the 50-per-cent inflation rate that has dogged the country in the last year.

The increases in fuel were expected to raise the prices of other goods and services and touch off a new round of labor unrest.

The cost of a gallon of gasoline rose 25 per cent to $1.80; home cooking gas prices rose 21 per cent; electricity increased 11 per cent, and water rates rose seven per cent.

The increases had been expected after expiration this month of a price-freeze agreement between the government and the national labor federation, the Histadrut. Between April and October, the Histadrut agreed to restrain wage demands while the government froze basic commodity prices.

During the period, rising costs forced the government to increase subsidies to keep prices stable, officials said.

Government officials also attributed the rises to the decline of the Israeli pound, which fell six per cent in the last month against an aggregate of foreign currencies.

The boosts are expected to prompt price increases in public transportation, industrial products and food.

The UIC Numbers Game

There is a tendency these days, whether talking about the Canadian dollar, the consumer price index or union wage demands, to put absolute faith in hard figures and cold statistics. There is a conviction that, while practically everything in this world can be twisted or kneaded into whatever shape is required, numbers cannot lie. They can, however, tell fibs, and this may well be the case with recent revelations about Canada's unemployment insurance system.

This week's disclosure that only 10 per cent of people disentitled by the Unemployment Insurance Commission end up on welfare roles has been widely interpreted to mean that 90 per cent of unemployment insurance recipients have no need for the benefits supplied. In the words of one analyst, "If you consider that the unemployment insurance benefits were their only source of income, then clearly up to 90 per cent of those people were able to get along without it or they would have to go on welfare." Actually, it's not so clear at all.

Such a simplistic conclusion ignores the fact that there is a real and significant difference between welfare and unemployment benefits, both in fact and in perception. Welfare is the last resort of the destitute, the end of the line for many keen and honest people who, for one reason or another, have fallen on hard times. It is seen as a form of charity, a helping hand from the government, an indication of ultimate failure. Rightly or wrongly, there is a stigma to welfare that cannot be dismissed.

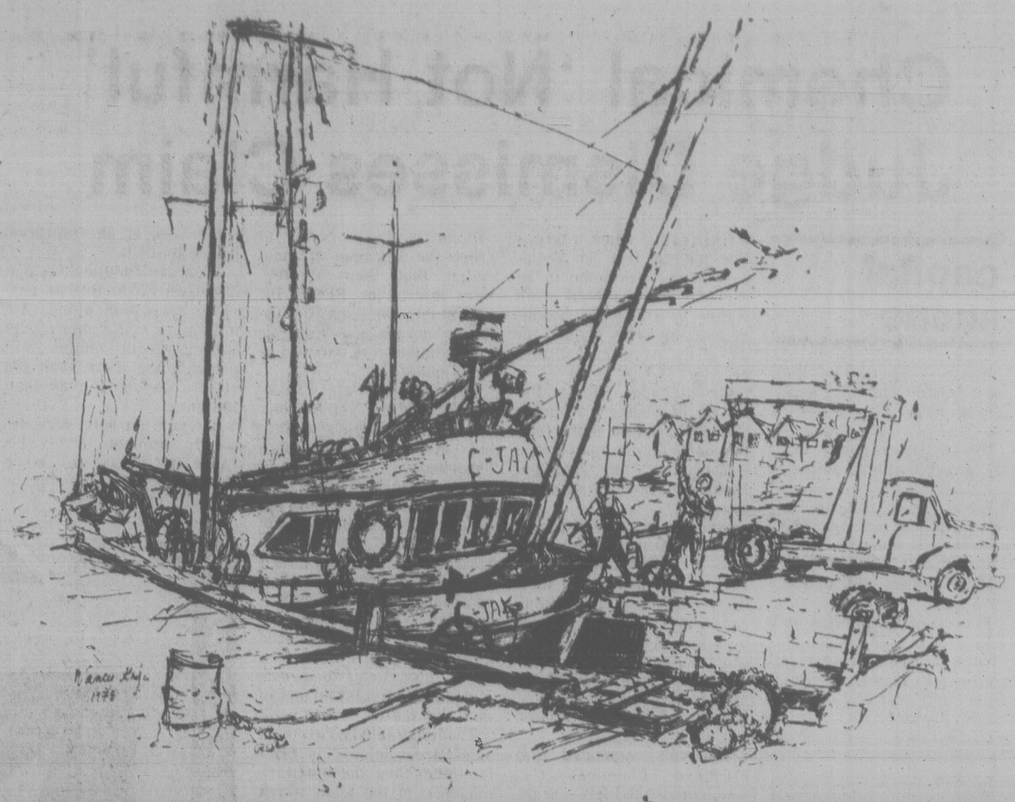

Unemployment insurance, on the other hand, is just what its title suggests: a form of insurance, paid for regularly by the working person as a hedge against unforseeable disaster. It is essentially no different from insurance purchased to protect a home against fire or theft, a car against collision or a family against loss of income through death. It is perceived as something bought and paid for which the unemployed worker is entitled to receive. And, in most cases, it is compulsory. The stigma is not there.

So to baldly suggest that disentitled unemployment insurance recipients do not show up on welfare rolls simply because they have no need of income is to forget that most people accept what they believe they worked for but may balk completely at seeking what they see as charity and a sign of failure.

These people would be more likely to cut back expenses, lower their standards of living, borrow against their homes, move in with their parents or take other disagreeable steps in order to avoid the welfare rolls. There is most probably some validity to the conclusion that the gap between unemployment insurance and welfare recipients indicates some abuse, but the assumption that there is only one explanantion fails to consider basic human factors like dignity and pride.

Another disclosure this week, that the government had discovered a further $142 million in UIC overpayments, should also be considered in its proper context. Here again some abuse and more bureaucratic mismanagement is indicated, but the amount concerned is understandable in light of the $4 billion handed out last year.

Critics so eager to attack the unemployment insurance system and demand tighter controls to reduce payments would do better to work towards building an economy that would permit people to find jobs and rejoin the work force. There can be no better way to cut down UIC expenditures.

Troller at West Bay marina — by Nancy Griffin

A Dangerous Arrogance

This week's damage settlement involving the Remington arms company and a Texas lawyer paralysed as a result of a firearm defect represents a classic case of corporate arrogance and disregard for public welfare.

In one of the largest lump-sum settlements on record, the company agreed to pay John Coates $6.8 million after a fault in a Remington rifle caused the weapon to fire prematurely. The bullet hit his spine and condemned him to a wheelchair for the rest of his life.

The settlement, however, in no way reflects any concern on the part of Remington for Coates or any of its thousands of other customers throughout the world. For it was only after the damage payment was agreed to and approved by a judge that the arms company decided to recall similar weapons and offer to make the "fairly simple" repair required to make them safe.

So since that tragic accident 10 months ago, some 10,000 dangerous rifles and pistols have been resting in Canadian households or in Canadian hands like so many time bombs while Remington waited for the result of the Coates case. And that is not even counting the hundreds of thousands of faulty weapons owned in the United States and elsewhere.

One wonders how long Remington would have allowed this threat to continue had the Coates case not been settled so quickly. And how many might have been crippled or killed in the meantime.

Lessons in Belgium For Canadian Experience

BRUSSELS — Last week the government of Belgium fell. Or, to be more precise, the six-party coalition which had been ruling the country for the past 18 months came unglued so that Prime Minister Leo Tindemans felt he had no option but to submit his resigation to the king.

The coalition (which included 80 per cent of the members of the Belgian parliament) had been set up for only one reason: to establish a government with a clear national mandate to reform the Belgian constitution as a more decentralized form of federalism in an effort to curb the growing antipathy between the country's two major linguistic-cultural groups — the Dutch-speaking Flemings and the French-speaking Walloons.

It was over this same issue that the coalition fell apart.

The Belgians take care to point out that the situation is not precisely the same as with the Quebec separatists in Canada. There are some differences in history, in ideology, in economics. "It is a very complex problem," they say over and over again.

But what is clear from talking to both Flemish and French Belgians is that if the details differ from the Canadian situation, many of the basic emotions and passions do not. The growing sense of nationalism on the part of the linguistic groups, the vicious circle of backlash between them, the determination of extremists in each group that their regions could survive on their own, the rise of political parties devoted to the protection of linguistic rights, and —perhaps worst of all — the increasing feeling of helplessness and frustration on the part of moderates from both sides: all have Canadian parallels that are unmistakeable.

It was out of this climate that the Tindemans coalition was born in 1977. The coalition was necessary because the Belgian constitution requires that a majority of two-thirds of the MPs approve any contitutional amendments. By then it had become clear to nearly everyone in Belgium that a dramatically restructured constitution was the only possible alternative to increasing moves towards separatism.

Over the past year the six parties forming the coalition, led by the Christian Democrats of Tindemans, and the Socialists, mainly a party of Wallonia, worked out a formula that was accepted by the six, albeit reluctantly by some of them.

The formula, known as the Egmont Pact, was based on the division of the country into three regions — Flanders, where the official language would be Dutch; Wallonia where the official language would be French; and the capital, Brussels, which would be a bilingual area. Each of the three regions would elect its own parliament which would have sole responsibility for what has been loosely termed "socio-economic affairs" — a significant change for the Belgians whose provincial governments have traditionally had almost no power at all.

The Egmont Pact would also establish "community councils" in each of the linguistic-cultural groups. These councils would have sole responsibility for all cultural affairs, including the power to make agreements with foreign countries in the area of cultural affairs.

With the central government would remain power only for such clearly national matters as justice, defence, and most external relations, including those with the European Economic Community.

Virtually all the major political and cultural groups accepted these basic principles of the pact. But there have been many difficulties with the details. Brussels has provided special problems because it is within the Flemish part of Belgium, yet the great majority of its citizens are French-speaking.

The issue which undid the coalition was the implementation of the pact. Tindemans' Christian Democrats were convinced that the only method of putting the changes into effect under the current constitution would, regrettably, take eight years before some of the most fundamental reforms could be realized. Several of the other parties, particularly the French-speaking, were not prepared to wait so long and believed that ways around the technical constitutional difficulties could be found if only the government was prepared to look for them.

It is not yet clear what the next steps will be in Belgium. The king is this week meeting with politicians of all parties to try to discover whether a new coalition could be formed or whether a general election will have to be held. There are deep fears that no matter what happens, much of the pact will have to be renegotiated.

Whether that is possible and even if it is, whether it will be enough to curb the growing forces of separatism are matters of deep concern to many Belgians. One of the doubters is Manu Rhys, editor of De Standaard, the largest Flemish paper in Belgium.

"I see the forces of separateness growing," says Rhys. "Me, I speak both languages, but the young people, even my sons, they will not learn the other language. And how can you have a country when the people cannot even talk to each other?"

And Rhys, while emphasizing the difference in details between Belgium and Canada, believes the same divisiveness is happening in Canada. "When I was first in Canada, 20 years ago or more, it was before the Pequistes had much power. But I could see the same feelings growing. I could see the same undercurrents, and I have seen or heard nothing since to make me change my mind." — B. McL.

Grits Whistling in the Wind

OTTAWA — All of the political straws in the wind point in the same direction these days: the Liberal party is in a state of national decline except in Quebec and that a further polarization of Canadian affairs on an English-French basis is a highly likely outcome of the next federal election.

By now, the straws are numerous and go as far back as the Liberal failure to unseat the Davis government in Ontario, even when its standing was diminished enough to cost it a majority in the legislature.

Narrow survival in Prince Edward Island, defeat in Nova Scotia, loss of all the byelections outside Quebec, extinction in the Saskatchewan legislature, inability to take Darcy McKeough's vacant Chatham seat in Ontario all followed. Finally, they were unable to topple Premier Hatfield in New Brunswick although the signs were strong at the beginning of the campaign that his government was in trouble with the electorate.

More Polarization

There are still brave Liberals whistling in the wind but to others these numerous signs do not suggest much grounds for party optimism in the federal election that cannot be avoided much longer. It is clear, however, that while the Liberals may not have retained all their traditional popularity in Quebec they still hold enough of it to do well electorally in that province.

Outside Quebec, the reservations still existing about Joe Clark will be of some political service to them in parts of Ontario but widespread rejection in metropolitan Toronto seems probable. The extent of Liberal rejection in western Canada is well-known.

Basic political trends in the country, coupled with the serious reservations that exist about the leaders of both major federal parties, make further English-French polarization a dark and growing cloud that is now considerably nearer than the horizon. Indeed, this happened in this week's New Brunswick voting — the Liberal strength lay in the French-speaking parts of that province while the Tories were successful in the English-speaking areas.

Dramatic changes in the economy are unlikely in the few months remaining before an election — indeed, the decision to establish the bank rate at the highest level in history can be expected to produce some general slowing down if it is maintained for long, regardless of the effect if any that it has on the dollar.

The post office strike involves great difficulties both in industrial relations and in its political consequences. It is probably a safe assumption that the public is more fed up with the inside postal workers than with the government but this is not an immutable situation. If enforcement of the government's tough legislation begins to produce apparent martyrs among the postal workers or their leaders the political implications of the government's stand could easily change.

The decision to name as mediator-arbiter a man without experience with labor problems, regardless of the esteem in which he is held as a judge, is strange. It has not always been the case with the Trudeau government but ordinarily inexperience is not considered a good qualification for a singularly difficult job. It would be explicable only if the government was unable to persuade one of the men with impressive backgrounds in this field to take on so difficult a task.

ALLAN BLAKENEY

As matters stand, the government's decision to transform the post office into a Crown corporation appears hopeless. However the present conflict ends, it will inevitably leave great bitterness and even more distrust in its wake, a crushing legacy for some new organizational structure to take on at the beginning.

Since post office workers have been given the right to strike by Parliament, it is doubtful whether the government followed the course of wisdom in rushing to end it by legislation. Until now, it has always been accepted that a legislated end to a strike in an important industry will work only if the workers are prepared to obey the law. That used to be freely stated by men in government when legislation was used periodically to end railway strikes.

Fear of increased political unpopularity is a more probable explanation of the government's course than the processes of cool judgment. The country has withstood postal strikes of considerable duration before now, at serious cost, but without disaster.

Some Are Despondent

Nothing is going well for the government at present and the future does not hold much promise of improvement. Next week, Trudeau and his team must face the provinces in further constitutional talks. Although some of the problems undoubtedly arose through poor drafting of the constitutional bill in its initial form, the basic federal proposals have proven to be without attraction for the provinces. Now, Trudeau, Otto Lang and Marc Lalonde will be facing premiers who, in several cases, have fresh mandates from their electorates, with only one of them in as dubious an electoral state as themselves — Frank Moores of Newfoundland.

The premier with the most urgent and pressing dispute with the federal government, Premier Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan, comes to the conference not merely with a fresh mandate, but with a very impressive one, won in large part on the very issue in dispute: control of resources. In any constitutional argument at this time, Blakeney has considerably better cards in his hand than the federal team and intellectually he is at least the peer of any of the three ministers who will be representing the federal side. Tactically, if he chooses next week as the occasion to press his case, it looks very much like a one-sided match.

In the background to all of this there is the serious weakness of the federal cabinet and the limited human material Trudeau has at hand when he attempts to strengthen it. Some of his associates are despondent. That is human and understandable.

St. Vincent de Paul

On behalf of the St. Vincent de Paul Society and the United Way, I express our gratitude for the article Victoria Poverty — It's Invisible But It's There (Times, Oct. 3).

Certain statements, however, were not true, and others misquoted. In particular, such references made regarding the ministry of human resources, "The ministry ignores the human element," and others referring to policy.

Both the ministry and the society attempt to meet human need. Both work within limitations. Over the last two or three decades the role of the public and private sectors has been undergoing considerable change. It is questionable whether the government should, in fact, be the primary provider of human services and assistance.

Those who work for the ministry of human resources are bound by policy regulations, made by an elected government. When their hands are thus tied, or when they are aware that a client or family might undergo hardship while awaiting red tape, the neighborhood human resources offices do refer people to us.

This is only one area with which St. Vincent de Paul attempts to meet human suffering and need. Home visits are another primary and essential function that needs to be stressed. Poverty comes in many forms — those who are sick, depressed, handicapped, lonely. The society is people caring about people. We appreciate your publicity and support during the United Way campaign. — Lynda Manthorpe, Executive Secretary, St. Vincent de Paul Society, 840 View Street.

Weak and Rotten

Re: Blow Those $$$ Blues; Times, Oct. 19:

Perhaps Dr. Cherneff knows something that the government has missed when he states that the dollar will correct itself in time — all we need is patience. If patience is all that is required, then our government is borrowing billions needlessly.

Granted, the falling dollar is only a symptom but surely it points out that we are "weak and rotten." Weak, because we have a government that is printing about 13 per cent more money each year. Rotten because we feel that the country can afford our trips outside of Canada when it is costing $2 billion per year of money we do not have.

Obviously, the government has come to the conclusion that the declining dollar is not healthy. While Dr. Cherneff is rather ambiguous as to how the declining dollar helps us, most economists have previously stated that exports would increase because the buyer would gain from lower prices.

I believe however, that the exporter raises his prices to wipe out any differences in costs to the buyer. This increases the exporter's profits without hurting the buyer (and would seem to be only good sense to him) but virtually negates any export advantages for the devalued currency. There is one more aspect which seems to work to our disadvantage and that is some proces of Canadian produced goods seem to be controlled by what the producer can get in the United States for his goods or commodity. —Martin Sweny, 3341 Doncaster Drive.

Dirty Deal

Here's a sample of persecution of the elderly (I'm 78) by these gangsters who are trying to prove their $15,000 a year jobs:

"The ministry of human resources is trying to ascertain whether the GAIN for seniors, some of which you are receiving, is costshareable with the federal government.

"I would appreciate the opportunity to visit you. This would enable me to complete a short form which is necessary for cost-sharing purposes. For this interview I will need to know your rent or mortgage amounts, house taxes, utilities, house maintenance and financial assets.

"This will in no way affect the amount of money received by you from federal and provincial pensions, it could possibly be of benefit to you."

Bull. Is Canada a communist country? Sounds like it. As a Canadian I resent this. I don't get GAIN, have told them the only cheque I get is from Ottawa and the old age pension — which I earned. In the Depression, we lived free and ate plain, ragged maybe.

Anyone who votes for these bastards causes a lot of suffering to the innocent. God help those who are really in need of this GAIN. Canadians always get the dirty deal. They are the ones who opened up the country, starved and died for it — the immigrants now live on easy street.

I am still waiting for the $25 a month promised in 1934 by Social Credit. Many old people who got these letters will worry and suffer, but who cares? Everyone gets old, and this fight is for the future. — Name withheld.

'Capitalism for People' in Alaska?

By WILLIAM GREIDER
The Washington Post

Alaska, a state where pioneering is still a daily reality, wants to launch a grand experiment in economic democracy — distributing new wealth to all its citizens, giving each an owner's share in Alaska's bountiful energy development.

If the scheme works, every Alaskan — men, women, children — will hold stock shares in huge capital investments such as the Trans-Alaskan oil pipeline or the proposed natural gas pipeline or a future petrochemical complex. Every year, citizens would each receive dividend cheques of several hundred dollars or more and, every year, their share of equity interest would grow.

In addition to spreading cash among the citizens, the idea might produce political benefits for the oil companies. If people have a personal stake in the profits, the public may be more sympathetic when private enterprise complains about government regulation and taxation.

Is the capitalist revolution upon us?

The "General Stock Ownership Plan" (GSOP) is the brainchild of Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, who derived the idea from the economic philosophy of Louis Kelso, a prophet of broadened capital ownership for workers. Last week, without any fanfare, the federal tax-law changes necessary for the venture were enacted by Congress in its omnibus tax bill, now awaiting the president's signature.

"This idea has floated around for years and nobody has taken it seriously," Gravel said. "But wait until the day when the first dividend cheques go out to every citizen of Alaska. When the long green touches their hands, you will see a revolution begin."

Gravel, his enthusiasm getting somewhat ahead of events, predicts the Alaskan venture will alter American politics and economics in profound ways, as other states rush to copy the model. The senator sells it as the alternative to welfare-state liberalism, as the way "to build a constituency for capitalism."

The potential political effects are almost as intriguing as the presumed economic benefits. Gravel's plan would make all citizens into minority partners with the major oil companies, a fact that could greatly alter public opinion on issues such as state taxation of energy ventures. If a citizen holds a personal stake in energy profits, albeit a small one, he or she may not like the idea of the state government increasing its taxes on those profits in order to finance public programs.

In the meantime, the state government of Alaska has not yet committed itself to do anything beyond studying the idea.

The legislature has placed Louis Kelso's San Francisco investment firm under a $180,000 contract to draw up the blueprint for this economic creature — a state-chartered corporation owned by everyone, empowered to borrow money, perhaps with a credit guarantee from the state, and to invest the money in private business ventures. Earnings from the venture would pay off the loan and the leftover profits would be distributed every year as dividends to each of the 405,000 citizen stockholders.

For starters, Gravel thinks the GSOP corporation might buy out British Petroleum's 16 per cent share in the oil pipeline. Owned jointly by eight oil companies, the pipe is already carrying North Slope crude oil south for distribution. BP has expressed an interest in selling its investment, valued at $1.5 billion, and the senator's staff calculates that, when the pipeline is at full capacity, BP's share of the revenue would run about $406 million a year.

This would be enough for the GSOP corporation, according to Gravel, to cover the operating costs plus the annual debt payments and still leave about $158 million a year for distribution in dividends.

That means about $390 per person. Nobody will get rich on $390, but a family of four would have four dividend cheques coming every year, or $1,560. This could make a real difference to a poor family, Gravel reasons, off-setting some of the government obligations to provide welfare and subsidized services.

Since the value of an oil pipeline depreciates as it ages, the citizen stock would presumably be worth considerably less than $1.5 billion when the debt is finally paid off in 15 or 20 years. After five years, however, a citizen could sell his or her share for the going price.

To avoid concentrated ownership, nobody could hold more than 10 shares.

Among other things, the Alaska legislature has to decide who qualifies as a "citizen." One idea is to set a cutoff date of last Jan. 1, so the state would not be flooded with new immigrants seeking a share of stock.

The heart of the scheme is credit, the power to borrow money. As Gravel and Kelso see the world, ordinary people, even poor people, could accumulate wealth in the same way that well-to-do people make their assets grow, if the government will intervene. A person who has sufficient assets or earnings to guarantee his or her credit can borrow money to make investments, pledging to pay back the loan with the new income expected from the investments.

Gravel's notion is that government, which in effect aggregates the assets of all citizens, can provide a mechanism for extending a share of credit to everyone — a chance to buy something based on its anticipated future earnings.

That concept is the essential novelty of Gravel's scheme. Beyond that point, the proposition works more or less like ordinary business transactions, with the same tax benefits, the same risks. The citizen-owned corporation would enjoy the same tax treatment as a partnership or a certain corporation with a limited number of stockholders (known as " Sub-chapter S" Corporations). The GSOP would be exempt from paying corporate income tax on its own earnings, but it would have to distribute at least 90 per cent of its profits every year to shareholders who would each pay individual income tax on the money. The GSOP could not, however, pass through losses, so its shareholders could not use it as a tax shelter.

Citizens may soon own oil pipeline if plan is adopted

'The High Priests of Jogging May Lead You to Your Grave'

By RICHARD M. RESTAK

(Restak is a Washington, D.C., neurologist who writes frequently on medical matters. This article appeared in The Washington Post).

If Karl Marx were alive today, he might well select exercise rather than religion as the "opiate of the people." On any given weekend the joggers, tennis players, bicyclists, swimmers and other exercise worshippers surely outnumber those assembled in churches and synagogues.

The comparison is not a casual one. "It is indeed a form of worship, an attempt to find God, a means to the transcendent," writes Joel Henning in his addition to the growing number of books on running. Henning tells of anointing his feet with vaseline or powder, of approaching the TV set where his running clothes are draped "as if it were a primitive altar" and of going through other "requisite rituals" before his usual trek. Even those who are less explicitly spiritual about exercise sometimes sound like faith-healers.

In his best-seller on running, James F. Fixx proclaims that he can "show you how to become healthier and happier than you ever imagined you could be."

But, as with other religions, those who worship vigorous exercise must depend on just that — faith. For the available evidence doesn't prove that it will make them healthier or live longer or that the psychological benefits they tell of are necessarily worth the price or good for them at all. Indeed, some exercisers, particularly among normally intense and competitive individuals who get "good feelings" from proving how far they can get their bodies to go, are probably inviting disaster. In short, while rigorous and regular exercise may well be good for some, it could just as easily be dangerous for others. The problem is with the often extravagant and indiscriminate claims made by exercise crusaders.

Dr. Thomas J. Bassler, an authority on marathon running and on atherosclerosis, for example, has declared that "when the level of vigorous exercise is raised high enough, the protection from coronary heart disease appears to be absolute." We did not need the recent death-while-jogging of 59-year-old Rep. Goodloe Byron of Maryland to tell us that this is nonsense. In just one week this month we also had, in the one metropolitan area of Washington, D.C., the death-while-jogging of 58-year-old Carl H. Madden, former chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, and the death, shortly after jogging, of 43-year-old aerospace engineer Keith P. Kerney.

Dr. Ray H. Rosenman, a San Francisco cardiologist, terms jogging "a miserable post-collegiate athletic travesty that has already killed scores, possibly hundreds." While it is actually difficult to say whether this type of exercise by itself has caused many people's deaths, it can be said with confidence that rigorous exercise, no matter how gradually and carefully built up, will certainly not assure protection from heart attacks.

A look at studies that show beneficial effects on the heart from exercise, in fact, suggests that the amounts required are surprisingly small. "In several studies, the greatest difference in coronary heart disease frequency or mortality was noted among those classified as inactive and slightly more active," reports Dr. Arthur S. Leon of the University of Minnesota Medical School. Writing in the medical journal Lancet, another research group found that "a minimum of 30 minutes of vigorous physical activity per week is associated with 'protection' against coronary artery disease."

Commenting last November on a much-publicized study involving 17,000 men, Dr. Ralph Paffenbrger Jr. of Stanford University's School of Medicine told the American Heart Association that if individuals burn up 2,000 calories a week they can reduce the risk of a heart attack by 64 per cent. Rather than a call for Olympian levels of exercise, this could be accomplished by no more than three hours of running or bicycling, or even five hours of walking in the normal course of a week.

As for longevity, the benefits of exercise are even more tenuous. In one study of 38,000 men followed anywhere from 25 to 50 years after college, athletes were found to live no longer than their non-athletic classmates.

Rather than exercise, intellectual endowment, socioeconomic status and job satisfaction turned out to be the most important non-biological indicators of longevity.

Some investigators are now speculating that exercisers, and especially those who spend more than six or seven hours a week at it, may represent a "self-selected group who may be genetically different," as Dr. Paul Milvy of New York's Mount Sinai School of Medicine puts it. In other words, many individuals who are healthier to begin with may be attracted to rigorous exercise activities; the exercise itself may have relatively little to do with their good health, however much they may believe otherwise.

What is exceedingly troubling, however, is that many other converts to the exercise cult may be individuals already facing a high risk of coronary heart disease because of their psychological makeup.

It is becoming generally recognized that, along with biological and environmental factors, a particularly aggressive, ambitious and competitive behavior pattern, commonly associated with what are known as "Type A" personalities, confers an additional coronary-disease risk of more than 30 per cent. There is also evidence suggesting that precisely such persons are engaging in the strenuous exercise crusade with the same sense of urgency and competitiveness, the determination to run that extra mile or go that extra lap across the pool or prove some other point.

For many such individuals, who may feel they are receiving important psychological benefits from strenuous exercise, the activity is only the recreational expression of the same attitudes which are at least partly responsible for the very heart disease that they believe exercise will prevent.

"It's taken us years to convince Type A's that they should get out of competitive sports," says Dr. Richard Schwartz. "Now instead of competing against somebody in tennis or racquet ball, they're competing with themselves over how many miles they can run and often comparing their performance with their associates."

They are not only comparing notes; they, evidently are pressuring friends and associates into following their lead as well. According to the Runners' Handbook, "Over at Forbes magazine, employees who don't exercise are gently admonished with notes from their colleagues." The same stresses that are crippling people in the nation's offices are being transferred into stressful rituals of lunch-hour exercise sessions.

Watching the intent facial expressions of overweight, balding 50-year-olds running in summer rain or winter snow does not give one much confidence that they are inwardly relaxed at the time. Nor does other evidence suggest that relaxation during exercise is common in this movement.

What is certain is that many of the physical and psychological claims made for rigorous exercise are extravagant and, in some cases, may be dangerous to those who believe them.

It is time for exercise to be viewed less as rigid dogma and more as an activity which is beneficial in modest doses and certainly preferable to the sedentary life, which many also enjoy, but whose other promises and perils are for the moment largely unknown.

The Day a Hawk Dived for Fun

There are bad days and there are good days. There are days we'd just as soon forget; and there are days that contain the stuff of which life-long memories are made. Last Saturday was one of the latter for me.

It was a day of high, endless, blue skies, a day of bright warm sun; a day so calm I could hear the leaves falling from the oaks. It was an Indian Summer day. It was also the day of the Red-tailed Hawks.

As one of those infrequent summery respites that punctuate the passing of the season, that day might have been lost in the memories of other days just like it — days of years gone by, but as the day of the Red-tailed Hawks it stands alone.

The day found me up on Island View Beach putting an eye on the local birds with a knot of like-minded citizenry. Gulls along the shore, loons and scoters in the water, and sparrows among the scrub and beach logs, had been receiving our attention when a great, dark bird was spotted soaring majestically along the ridge backing the coastal flats. A Golden Eagle!

As it drifted off over James Island, on its way to a date with an English Hare on San Juan Island, our eyes turned back to the blue vault above the ridge and to another dark bird soaring almost out of sight. This bird was so high that had it not been for its typical outline identification would have been impossible. It was a Red-tailed Hawk, our most common big, soaring hawk — not so big as a Golden Eagle but just as impressive in its own right.

After watching the Red-tail for several minutes as it first spiraled high on the rising air and then dropped out of its spiral in a long, shallow dive, only to pick up another thermal and begin spiraling again, I concluded that, like me, the bird was simply enjoying itself.

While the Red-tail was performing its own kind of space program, more mundane activities continued far below. A gang of crows chivyed a Cooper's Hawk until, in an effort to evade their attentions, it too spiraled high into the blue. A family of Ravens, croaking conversationally, gamboled just above the trees, seemingly thoroughly enjoying themselves too, and a Golden-crowned Sparrow gave a brief but self-conscious rendition of its plaintive whistled song.

But my eyes kept drifting back to that speck in the sky high above. With utter disdain for gravity, the Red-tail swept to the very edge of visibility several times, and each time, ultimately succumbing to the pull of earth, it would sweep back to reasonable heights. At times it was joined by another of its kind and both frolicked in the sheer delight of free flight.

It was while I was speculating on the dangers of thinking that birds, like people, could find such a day made for fun, that I became a witness to one of those events naturalists often dream about but seldom see.

I had my binoculars on one of the Red-tails, which, even with a seven-powered assist, was barely a black dot against the blue, when I saw the bird fold its wings and simply fall out of the sky. In less time than it takes to tell, the big hawk dropped like a stone, through what was easily more than a thousand feet of that beautiful October sky.

For what seemed like several seconds, time stood still as I followed the bird down, down, down. Suddenly it passed the tree line. In a flash, and with a wild, abandoned scream, it plunged past a Raven which, with a neat roll, evaded the speeding hawk and continued on its way.

At the same time, and with a rattle of ragged pinions, the hawk broke its dive a few feet above the ground and mounted again into the blue — with another triumphant scream.

Had the Raven been marked for prey? Had the great stoop been a hunting stoop? I thought not. Red-tails do, occasionally, try for birds in flight but a bird as big as a Raven? Not likely.

No, those birds left me with the distinct feeling that both knew it was only a game, a game reserved for just such unforgettable days as last Saturday.

CKVU TV Pleads Pinch Despite Top U.S. Shows

VANCOUVER (CP) — Only the purchase of top United States television shows and the deletion of some U.S. TV signals on local cablevision allows the independent CKVU to pay its bills, says the station's head.

Daryl Duke, president of Western Approaches which runs CKVU, told the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommmunciations Commission (CRTC) Thursday that the station was still losing money after two years in operation.

Duke was at the hearings to request a licence renewal for five years from next April. The decision will be announced later.

He said CKVU had to buy good first-run programming from its opening day to get an audience in a nine-channel market.

CKVU has taken advantage of the CRTC'S regulations on program substitution, he said. Under the plan, called head-to-head programming, cable companies must substitute a Canadian station's signal for a U.S. channel when both are transmitting the same show simultaneously.

He said CKVU has had audience ratings it could not have otherwise had because television sets tuned to the U.S. channel are credited to the Canadian channel in audience ratings.

Duke said he was becoming increasingly anxious about the increasing number of stations available on cable systems and said that KVOS in Bellingham, Wash. was taking millions of dollars a year in advertising revenues out of the Vancouver market.

Duke later intervened in the CHEK-TV's application for a licence renewel, asking the CRTC to have it bumped onto the converter system because of the threat the Victoria TV station poses to CKVU.

But CRTC panel chairman Charles Daflen commented: "It runs smack against what we're trying to do, to get more bonafide Canadian signals to viewers."

Duke argued that CHEK-TV should not be on cablevision in Vancouver when it is only licensed to serve Vancouver Island.

Said Duke: "So long as CHEK intrudes into Vancouver with a place on the basic service of all mainland cable companies, CHEK will — with the buying power of its wealthy sister station, CHAN-TV (Vancouver) — find itself tempted to buy programs which CKVU must buy in order to survive."

The CTV network is already buying up everything it can get, he said, from Battlestar Galactia to Grandpa Goes to Washington, all of which would go to CHAN and CHEK as CTV affiliates.

BLUE LINING GIVEN CLOUDS

Residents of Western Canada will see large blueish-white clouds drifting across the sky in the next few days if the weather permits the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) to initiate a chemical cloud experiment.

A NASA spokesman said Friday cannisters of barium are being released from an orbiting Delta rocket over Alaska as part of an experiment to study the flow of ionized particles in and above the earth's ionosphere.

The chemical is harmless, NASA says. The resulting clouds' movements will be photographed by NASA scientists.

The experiment will be delayed day-to-day if the weather is not clear enough for sharp photography. Residents of Alaska, Eastern Russia and the Northwestern United States will also be able to see the spectacle.

Indians Seek Claims Unity

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Calls for unity among British Columbia's native people who are negotiating land claims were tempered Friday by a delegate to the first all-tribal and groups conference in this central B.C. city.

"We're not the same," said George Watts of the Nootka Tribal Council.

"Don't get taken by the provincial organization idea. The strength lies with the tribal groups."

The weekend conference is marked by the absence of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs which is boycotting the meeting, calling it a federal government gimmick to stampede Indians into an agreement against their wills.

The meeting is sponsored by the United Native Nations (UNN), the Alliance of Indians Bands and the Native Brotherhood of B.C.

"The aboriginal issue shouldn't be used as a political football in the native power structure," said Herbert Maitland of the Haisla tribe.

One of the problems with Indian people from organizations is they act like little kids."

He said his people are working on an aboriginal settlement which should be completed in 18 months.

The thing Indians in B.C. have in common is their poverty, Maitland told the mostly-native gathering of about 80 delegates and observers.

Bill Wilson, president of the UNN, said natives should forget about relying on white lawyers and consultants for answers for their problems.

"Very seldom do we take it on ourselves to grapple with our own problems. People at the local levels know how to do this."

"We want a plan of action of Indians for Indians," he said, adding that an aboriginal council would offer a unified front on aboriginal rights while allowing tribal groups to solve their own problems.

Indians at the local levels of government in B.C. should begin to develop solutions to the question of aboriginal rights, he said.

A call for unity came from Ed Newman, of the Native Brotherhood, who said Indians show government they could stand together.

Delbert Guerin, of the Alliance of Indian Bands, added: "Somehow there has to be a people's system devised where the federal and provincial governments realize they've never extinguished our aboriginal rights."

Cominco Mine Walkout Ends

ELKFORD (CP) — A wildcat walkout at Fording Coal operation in this southeastern British Columbia community ended Friday night after workers voted to accept an agreement worked out with mine manager Dave Johnson.

The walkout began Wednesday after a worker was fired following a dispute involving the use of machinery.

Ad Tasteless? Boycott Item

VANCOUVER (CP) — The question of the propriety of feminine hygiene products being advertised on television should be settled in the marketplace, Donald Smith, British Columbia Television Ltd. (BCTV) vice-president, recommended to Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications (CRTC) Commission hearings this week.

He agreed with a suggestion by Rosalie Gower, part-time commissioner from Ottawa, that women should buy only those personal hygiene products which are not advertised on television.

"That's a good idea. Settle it in the market place," he said.

Ms. Gower, who does not have a vote in CRTC decisions, had referred to the 29,000 signatures she had received from readers of The Vancouver Sun objecting to TV commercials for the products.

She said they are not carried on CBC and asked for the position of BCTV, operators of CHAN, Vancouver, and CHEK, Victoria, on them.

BCTV president Ray Peters said the commercials are viewed when they are received and also go through a self-regulatory body set up by a number of major stations in Canada.

"I don't happen to find any of the commercials we run offensive," he said. "You should see some of the ones we are not carrying."

Clumsy-Kidnap Trio Get 12 to 20 Years

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three members of a kidnap gang that couldn't think straight were sentenced to prison terms of 12 to 20 years Friday for the May '12 abduction of a bank manager's wife.

Emil Joseph Mantha of Vancouver, Leslie Roger McKinney and Leah Ann Slemmer, both of Snohomish, Wash., and Dino Franco Pitton of Vancouver were found guilty Friday by Mr. Justice George Murray.

Mantha was given 20 years, Mrs. Slemmer 15 and McKinney 12. Pitton is to be sentenced Dec. 4.

They were convicted of kidnapping Heather Haley who was abducted from her home in nearby Delta and locked in a trunk for four hours.

The kidnapping ended when the gang telephoned inaccurate ransom drop directions to bank manager Kenneth Haley, failed to pick up the $100,000 cash left for them, then released the victim in a downtown lane.

Mrs. Haley, mother of two children, was not physically harmed but was unable to identify her abductors. The ransom was retrieved by Haley.

The kidnappers later told Haley to drop the ransom in a lane near a downtown intersection, but named two parallel streets.

The kidnappers were extraordinarily inept, said Justice Murray.

The judge ruled that McKinney and Mrs. Slemmer were the actual kidnappers and that Mantha and Pitton were aiders and abettors in a common intention.

He held, on the basis of police testimony, that the note left behind at the Haley residence and the notes in the kidnappers' house — all of which helped convict them — were written by Mrs. Slemmer and Mantha.

Socreds 7 Months Behind: NDP

Former finance minister Dave Stupich asked Friday why the Socred government can't produce detailed spending and revenue figures for the fiscal year ended March. 31.

Stupich, the NDP MLA for Nanaimo, said he cannot understand when the figures couldn't be produced since the government Friday released a six-month statement for the period ended Sept. 30.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe released the province's second quarterly report which showed the government had over-estimated expenditures, under-estimated revenues, and had a surplus $72 million greater than it expected.

Stupich said the NDP government was criticized in 1975 for not getting the public accounts, detailed year-end statement of revenue and expenditures, out before the begining of August.

He said former premier W.A.C. Bennett issued the public accounts in July.

"We were never beyond the end of August. They (current B.C. government) were late last year, but not this late. We're now at the end of October," Stupich said in a telephone interview from Nanaimo.

"If they can get the six-month statement out for Sept. 30, but appear not to be able to get out the one for March 31, six months earlier, then one wonders why.

"What is there in there they don't want us to see — after all that is the detailed listing of revenues and expenditures. Rather than showing what each department is doing, it shows what's happening within the department.

"It would seem it is being held up deliberately," Stupich said.

Wolfe said the surplus for the first six months of the year is $114.4 million.

He said revenues totalled $2.2 billion, $32 million more than expected. Expenditures were $2.1 billion, $40.1 million below that forecast in the budget.

The finance minister said the province will end the year with a balanced budget.

Stupich predicted the government will end the year with a surplus.

"Last year at this time, he (Wolfe) had an interim surplus roughly of the same amount, and there was a surplus at the end year," he said.

"Comparing it to last year, it would appear we're heading for another surplus which will put them in a good position for election giveaways."

The B.C. government ended its last fiscal year with a surplus of $140.5 million.

19-POUND MUSHROOM

SOFIA, Bulgaria (UPI) — A 73-year-old peasant shone with pride when he picked up a mushroom last week, but he had a hard time putting it in the trunk of his small car, the national news agency BTA reported.

The agency said Neiko Neikov of the northeastern Bulgarian town of Shoumen found the puff-ball mushroom with a diameter of 6.56 feet. It weighed 19 pounds.

He also found six puff-balls weighing from 6.6 to 9.9 pounds, BTA said.

GCOS Ltd.

Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. (GCOS) reported unaudited net earnings of $12,900,000 for the first nine months of 1978, up from $10,201,000 for the same period last year.

The company's earnings for the period would have been higher but profit for the third quarter, at $2,680,000, was down substantially from the $7,757,000 recorded for the same quarter in 1977. GCOS said the drop in third-quarter earnings resulted primarily from a 27-day strike which ended Oct. 13.

GCOS, which started Canada's first commercial oil-sands operation a decade ago, had a cumulative deficit of $11,122,000 as of Sept. 30, 1978.

Goodyear

Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company reported a third quarter profit of $45.5 million, or 63 cents a share, compared with a profit of $33.5 million, or 46 cents a share, a year earlier. Sales rose to $1.91 billion from $1.63 billion. Profit for the nine months fell to $154.5 million, or $2.14 a share, from $163.4 million or $2.26 a share, a year ago. Sales rose to $5.49 billion from $4.95 billion.

Beth. Steel

Bethlehem Steel Corp. reported a profit for the third quarter and for nine months compared with losses for last year's comparable periods. It reported a profit of $64.4 million, or $1.48 a share, after a loss of $477 million, or $19.92 a share a year ago. The company said revenues rose to $1.57 billion from $1.29 billion.

Mobil Corp

Mobil Corporation reported an 8.5 per cent increase in its third quarter profit and a 13.3 per cent rise for the nine months. The company, whose principal subsidiary is the Mobil Oil Company, posted a profit of $259 million or $2.44 a share, compared with $239 million or $2.26 dollars a share, on revenues of $9.1 billion compared with $8.4 billion a year ago. Profits for the nine months were $795 million or $7.50 a share, compared with $702 million or $6.63 dollars a share.

Gregory Ind.

Gregory Industries Ltd. reported that earnings before extraordinary items increased to $1.3 million or $1.27 a share in the nine months ending Sept. 30 compared to $115,591 or 11 cents in the same period of 1977. Sales were $17,156,488 compared to $10,509,472.

An extraordinary gain of $127,000 from the application of previous losses against income tax pushed final net earnings to $1,436,506 or $1.39 a share in the latest period. A similar tax credit of $90,000 and one of $195,000 from a subsidiary made final net earnings a year ago $400,591 or 39 cents a share.

Gregory has sawmill and paneling operations in both B.C. and Washington state.

A dividend of five cents, the company's second payout, was declared and will be paid Dec. 1 to shareholders of record Nov. 15.

Alcoa

Aluminum Co. of America reported third quarter earnings were $83.8 million, or $2.39 a share, compared with $42.6 million, or $1.21 a share in 1977.

"Shipments during the third quarter were largely unaffected by the seasonal slump that traditionally occurs in late summer," said Alcoa chairman W. H. Krome George. "There was strength in virtually all of aluminum's major markets," he said.

Sales for the quarter were $1 billion, compared with $828 million last year.

For the ninth months, Alcoa earned $212.5 million, or $6.05 a share, compared with $150.4 million, or $4.31 a share in 1977. Sales for the period were $2.9 billion, compared with $2.5 billion in 1977.

Bethlehem

Bethlehem Copper Corp. reported profits of $1,794,000 or 28.4 cents a share for the three months ended Sept. 30, compared with a loss of $251,000 or four cents a share in the same period last year.

Third-quarter revenues were $8,692,000 compared with $3,255,000 last year.

Bethlehem president Bryan Reynolds attributed the improved performance to higher copper prices, lower stripping ratios, improved production from the company's new molybdenum plant in the Highland Valley, and the weakened Canadian dollar.

For the nine-month period ending Sept. 30, profits were $2,792,000 or 44.2 cents a share, compared with $388,000 or 6.1 cents a share in the same period last year. Revenues were $20,969,000 compared to $25,086,000.

Lornex

Lornex Mining Corp. reported earnings of $7,647,000, or 93 cents a share, for the nine months ending Sept. 30, compared with $7,368,000, or 89 cents a share, for the same period last year.

Revenue was $61,111,000, compared with $58,258,000.

"Net revenue and operating profit were slightly higher primarily because of higher molybdenum prices," a company spokesman said.

Gibraltar

Gibraltar Mines Ltd. reported a loss of $1,527,000, or 13 cents a share, for the nine months ending Sept. 30, compared with a profit of $676,000, or six cents a share, in the same period last year.

No revenues were disclosed.

"The principal causes of the loss were the labor dispute that has halted operations since May 26, and the lower grade of ore milled."

Sandowners Like Their Quinellas

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

"I think the racing people here enjoyed the quinella more than the exacta," said George Harknett, president of the Capital City Turf Club following Friday's nine-race thoroughbred card at Sandown Park.

Harknett was referring to the fact that quinella wagering had been re-introduced following a trial period of exacta wagering on all races since the start of the meeting, Oct. 18.

There had been quinella wagering here in years past, but this season the format had been changed to go along with the pattern that had been established in the harness meeting this summer.

However, there had been some complaints from the thoroughbred bettors and, in an informal poll taken by Director of Racing Aubrey Davies, most patrons expressed a preference for some form of quinella wagering.

On Friday the change was made and there was quinella wagering on the first four races and exacta betting on the last five for the first time.

"I think we did the right think in re-establishing the quinella," Harknett said. "And I'm quite pleased with the reception."

"There was a significant increase in the handle for the first four races," said Davies, "but we'll have a far better comparison after today's (Saturday's) card."

As it was, the crowd Friday was 1,775 and the mutuel handle a respectable $152,304. This is still short of the hoped-for $20,000-a-race average, figured as the break-even mark, but it was up about $29,000 over one week ago. So that's encouraging to CCTC directors.

On the track, Will She Be Frisky, a three-year-old chestnut filly, owned by R. Smith and trained by William Chisman, was a handy winner of the day's feature, the Capital City Commercial Club Invitational Handicap, over one mile.

Ridden by jockey Robert Stein, Will She Be Frisky took the lead coming off the stretch turn and was home free by three lengths. Will She Be Frisky paid $4.80, $3.50 and $2.80. Blaven was second, Ask the Fleet was third and second-choice Naramata Belle was fourth. The exacta was worth $26.90.

Meanwhile, the Chinese community—well, the part that supports Sandown well—should have gotten fat in the ninth.

A popular locally-owned winner was the three-year-old bay filly, Kan Tuk. Runner-up in the marathon at Ex-Park this year, Kan Tuk showed she was dead fit when she came through on the rail to pip the pace-setting Marine Driver on the wire in the one-mile event, which was run just one-fifth of a second slower (1:43.2) than Will She Be Frisky ran the feature.

Owned By Peter Lee and Lee Wai Wing, and trained by Len Lucas, Kan Tuk returned $13.10 under jockey Meno Mena.

Jockeys Mark Walker and Floyd Tompkins each had two winners. Walker, who now has 13 for the meeting, was up on Ambling Art ($6.10) in the second and Gay Debbie ($17.30) in the sixth.

Tompkins rode Village Clown ($4.00) in the third and Brauer Rabbit ($13.80) in the fifth. The victory by Village Clown, $10,000 claim in California in 1975, was his first in three years. He didn't race in 1976 and went to the post only three times last year.

An impressive winner and a likely derby starter next Saturday was the filly Woodmont Clare, which won the seventh by four lengths and recorded the best time of the day for the 6½ furlongs, 1:21.3. Woodmont Clare returned $8.10.

Morning Knight ($4.90) joined the two-time winners club by scoring in the fourth. Our Neelie ($7.60) and Gaudies Desire returned the best quinella, $28.20, while the overlooked Gay Debbie ($17.30) and Chili Chinook combined for an $82.10 exacta in the sixth.

Trainer Bill Olson claimed Little Rogue for $3,200 out of the sixth for Liz Gold.

CLOSE FINISHES EXPECTED TODAY

U.S. Skaters In Lead

VANCOUVER (CP) — Close competition generally brings out the best in athletes and, if that's the case at the Skate Canada competition, it should produce some exciting action in today's wrap-up of the women's singles event.

Lisa-Marie Allen of the United States moved into the lead in the women's singles Friday night with an impressive performance in the short program.

The tall 18-year-old from Garden Grove, Calif., received first-place marks from six of the seven judges as she moved past Kristina Wegelius of Finland and Claudia Kristofics-Binders of Austria.

She now has 63.24 points overall and nine ordinals, just ahead of Kristofics-Binders, who has more points—63.36—but trails in ordinals.

World champion Charles Tickner of the United States held onto his lead in the men's singles, despite being outskated in the short program by Fumio Igarashi of Japan and Vern Taylor of Canada.

Tickner's two closest competitors after the figures—Scott Hamilton of the U.S. and Brian Pockar of Canada—had trouble in the short program.

In ice-dancing, Krisztina Regoczy and Andras Sallay of Hungary, the bronze medalists at the 1978 world championships, look certain to take the gold here, leaving the top Canadian and Russian couples to battle for the silver.

Lorna Whighton and John Dowding of Toronto have 95.96 points and 22 ordinals, while Marina Zueva and Andrei Vitman, who finished just behind the Canadian pair at the world championships, have 95.28 points and 23 ordinals.

Janet Morrisey of Ottawa is the top Canadian in seventh place in the women's event.

Cougar Attack Continues To Experience Problems

Scoring still doesn't come easy to the Victoria Cougars and the Western Major Junior Hockey League club continues to experience problems on the road.

Goals came easier for Portland and the Winter Hawks skated to a 7-5 victory in Portland on Friday.

The teams meet again tonight in Victoria's Memorial Arena (8:30) but the first meeting between the Western Division rivals pointed out Cougars' problem on attack. Territorially, Cougars skated on even terms.

The edge in offensive sharpness, however, belonged to Portland. With sophomore centre Tim Tookey scoring three goals in succession, Portland connected for three power-play goals in the somewhat-rough encounter.

Cougars managed only one power-play goal, couldn't cash in early when enjoying a two-man advantage for almost two minutes, and even muffed a penalty shot.

The free skate on goal was awarded rookie Bob Smith but the Cougar winger fired the puck right at the pads of Portland goalie Bart Hunter.

"We're getting shots away," admitted Victoria coach Jack Shupe, "but the players aren't following up for the second and third chances. They're turning away from the play after the initial shot."

Already missing defenceman Mark Robinson and captain Geordie Robertson, Shupe had was confronted with another problem Friday. Defenceman Scott Lang came up with an ankle injury in the third period. It's not believed serious, but it may be enough to keep Lang out of the lineup tonight.

The setback enabled Seattle Breakers to move past the Cougars into first place in the division. Breakers dropped the Pat Ginnell-coached Lethbridge Broncos 7-4 in a brawl-infested game at Seattle to move one point ahead of Victoria.

In other games Friday, Billings Bighorns belted Medicine Hat Tigers 11-6, Edmonton Oil Kings defeated the Regina Pats 9-3 while Saskatoon Blades and Brandon Wheat Kings fought to an 8-8 draw.

Off the ice, Calgary Wranglers, last in the Central Division, have signed three of Finland's top juniors.

Jim Morley, team owner, said Kari Heikkila, Pertti Lehvila and Juha Makinen are to arrive from Finland today and may be inserted into the lineup for Sunday's game against Billings. Heikkila is a defenceman while the other two are forwards.

Friday's other singles match between Greg Halder of Toronto and Mexico's Emilio Montano was suspended by rain with the score 4-4 in the first set. It was to be resumed today prior to the scheduled doubles match.

BUCKS SIGN VAN LIER

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Veteran guard Norm Van Lier, waived by Chicago Bulls on Oct. 11, has signed with Milwaukee Bucks of the National Basketball Association.

Coliseum Lease Threatens Finley's Latest Bid to Sell

CHICAGO (AP) — Charles O. Finley said Friday night that a lease for the prospective new owners of Oakland A's baseball franchise is the only potential obstacle to his sale of the club.

But he is not sure a lease agreement can be reached.

Finley tried to sell the team earlier this year to Denver oilman Marvin Davis but his lease at the Oakland Coliseum, which has nine years to run, blocked the sale and transfer of the club to Denver.

Finley hopes the Coliseum board will let him out of his lease this time and grant the prospective owners the lease they are seeking.

Oakland furniture dealer Ed Bercovich said Friday his group has agreed to buy the team from Finley and keep it in Oakland.

"The Coliseum last year wanted $3 million and the National League put up $1 million, the American League put up $1 million and Charlie Finley put up $1 million," Finley said. "Then they (the board) wanted the San Francisco Giants to play half their games in Oakland and they (the Giants) agreed to do that.

"Then the Coliseum at the last minute tried to take the concession and parking revenue away from the San Francisco Giants and at that time the San Francisco Giants told the Oakland Coliseum board to go fly a kite."

Finley said the prospective owners have asked the board for a nine-year lease, which they would be able to get out of if the A's fail to draw one million fans in each the second and third years. If the A's drew that many, the prospective owners would have to keep the team in Oakland for the life of the lease, Finley said.

"They (board members) have been yelling they want local ownership so local ownership has appeared on the scene and we have agreed on a price.

"The monkey is again on the Coliseum's back. They blew the last one. Let's see if they blow this one. They wouldn't surprise me if they did."

FOUR'S A CROWD under backboard during Friday night's exhibition basketball game at McKinnon Gym between UVic Vikings and Victoria DataTech. That's DataTech's Varick Cutler (12) and Jim Duddridge in dark jerseys battling white-shirted antagonists Ken Kirzinger (30) and Ted Anderson (22). DataTech eked out 89-88 victory. DataTech Drama In Cliff-Hanger

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

If you wanted cliff-hanging basketball, they had it.

If, on the other hand, you were more inclined toward the unexpected, Victoria DataTech had that, too.

The occassion was the season-opening basketball doubleheader at the McKinnon Gymnasium Friday night involving UVic Vikings and Vikettes and the city's two Senior "A" clubs, DataTech men and the resurrected Home Lumber women.

DataTech won the men's encounter before a crowd of about 1,000 by doing a reverse Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde routine, going from the horrible in the first half to the sublime in the second to edge the Vikings 89-88. DataTech trailed by 18 points at the intermission.

Although not quite as dramatic in their form reversal, Vikettes used the same formula to beat Home Lumber, making a return to competition after a one-year hiatus following their Canadian championship in 1977. The score was 66-63 and Vikettes had to overcome a 10-point deficit to get there.

"We didn't get into our offensive patterns at all in the first half," DataTech coach Walt Burrows explained of his team's turnaround. "But we were more disciplined in the second half. We got our offensive patterns working and we were better defensively."

Viking coach Ken Shields agreed, although he figured a defensive lapse late in the third quarter did in his hopefuls.

Statistically, there was little difference between the clubs with one exception — foul shooting. DataTech was 21-for-25 but Vikings managed only 18 of 31.

BHly Loos, who led Vikings to last season's Canada West conference title, paced DataTech against his former team Friday by counting 22 points while Bob Burrows added 21. Reni Dolcetti was UVic's best scorer with 20 points.

It was Loos who finally got DataTech ahead with a jump shot with six minutes remaining. The winners went on to build an 87-81 lead until Robbie Parris sank a pair of baskets to make it 87-86 with 40 seconds to go.

Clutch foul shooting by Bob Burrows made it 89-86, which was just enough as Parris drove in for another basket before time ran out.

Vikettes wiped out a six-point deficit in the final five minutes after Carol Turney, moving from Vikettes to Home Lumber this year, fouled out. Carol led both teams with 29 points.

Despite the loss, coach Jack Lusk wasn't overly disappointed.

"This was our first game of the year and you can hardly expect the team to come together after only five or six practices," he pointed out.

The outcome might have been different, too, had Home Lumber not lost two of its top rebounders in Marg Mainwaring and Sandy Lewis, both sidelined in the first five minutes with ankle injuries. Marg's was diagnosed as a sprain and Sandy may have a chipped bone.

Kathy Shields, coaching her first game after taking the Vikette reigns from Mike Gallo, was pleased but not surprised at the victory.

"We were a little nervous in the first half and didn't play all that well," she said, "but our conditioning and training helped in the end."

Michele Belanger, a transfer student from Laurentian University in Sudbury, paced Vikettes with 24 points.

The same teams square off at McKinnon again tonight, Vikettes and Home Lumber meeting at 6:30 and DataTech and Vikings following at 8:30.

UVic Happy As Bears Tie

A scoreless draw between Alberta Golden Bears and University of British Columbia Thunderbirds was good news for Victoria's Vikings.

Friday's result in Vancouver means Vikings have clinched the Canada West University Athletic Association's soccer title. Vikings are three points ahead of the Bears but Alberta's last league game was this afternoon's match with UVic at Royal Athletic Park.

Vikings also have one game left with UBC.

Finally, a Mark Against Tyees

Mark Jackson will never win a popularity contest at Victoria High.

It was Jackson's second-half goal, set up by Jos Iruretagoyana's relay, that finally put an end to Victoria High Tyees' remarkable defensive record and produced a 1-0 victory for Spectrum in Greater Victoria High School Soccer League play Friday.

Jackson's goal was the first to be scored this season against the Tyees.

Perhaps more important, it led to a result that threw the scramble for first division honors wide open.

Mt. Douglas Thistles took advantage of the upset to move to within one point of first place with a tough, 2-1 victory over stubborn Reynolds Roadrunners. Drew Porter and Rich Stebeck scored for Mt. Doug while Greg Pynn replied for the Runners.

Ties were the order of the day in the second division. Esquimalt Dockers tied Belmont Braves 3-3 while Parkland Panthers and Claremont Spartans drew 2-2.

Neil Chittick, with two, and Dave Labarge scored for Belmont while Larry Nohr, Dean Shabatowski and Derek Sitar counted Esquimalt's goals.

The Parkland-Claremont scorers were not available.

Cowichan Club In Semi-Finals

Victoria-area schools claimed three of the four semi-final berths in the annual Vancouver Island high school girls' field hockey championships that were winding up today at the University of Victoria.

Mt. Douglas, Spectrum, Oak Bay and Cowichan advanced to the semi-finals after completing preliminary round-robin play with perfect 2-0 won-lost marks and then scoring shutout victories in the quarter-finals matches Friday.

Mt. Doug was to face Cowichan while Spectrum went against Oak Bay in semi-finals this morning.

Flames Continue To Enjoy Success

By The Associated Press

Eric Vail isn't sure why Atlanta Flames have suddenly become the National Hockey League's winningest team; he's too busy enjoying it.

"This is a great feeling," said Vail, who scored two goals as the Flames raised their record to 6-0-2 with an 8-5 decision over New York Islanders Friday night. "Things are really falling into place."

But why are the Flames winning?

"There's nothing I can put my finger on," said Vail. "We know we're a good team and can beat the other teams."

Teammates Guy Chouinard and Dan Bouchard had their own ideas.

Bob MacMillan also scored two goals for Atlanta.

In the only other NHL game, Detroit Red Wings beat Colorado Rockies 5-2.

In the only World Hockey Association games on Friday, Winnipeg Jets beat New England Whalers 6-4 and Birmingham Bulls downed Indianapolis Racers 4-2.

Rookie Roland Cloutier scored two goals for the Red Wings, who put the Denver game away with three goals in the second period.

The game was marked by a bench-clearing brawl that was touched off by a fight between Cloutier and Colorado's Clayton Pachal with 1:22 remaining in the game. Two major and three misconduct penalties were assessed and only seven skaters were left to finish the game.

OFF THE ICE, Right wing Wilf Paiement of Colorado has been suspended indefinitely pending a final review of facts surrounding a match penalty he received in a game Wednesday . . . NHL headquarters also announced that forwards John Wensink of Boston Bruins and Harvey Bennett of St. Louis Blues have been suspended for two games each as a result of match penalties assessed in a game at St. Louis on Tuesday . . . NHL executive vice-president Brian O'Neill, who held a preliminary hearing into Paiement's case, said the review will include a medical report on Detroit Red Wings forward Dennis Polonich, who was struck in the face by Paiement's stick and is in hospital in satisfactory condition.

Philadelphia Flyers have sent rookie winger Danny Lucas, a one-time Victoria Cougar, to their Maine Mariners farm team in the American League . . . Lucas had played in six games this season and scored one goal . . . The move was made to get Lucas more playing time . . . The Flyers also disclosed that winger Don Saleski suffered a sprained wrist against Toronto Maple Leafs Thursday and was a question mark for Sunday's game against Vancouver Canucks . . . Goaltender Pete LoPresti and defenceman Jean Potvin are being recalled by Minnesota North Stars from their Oklahoma City farm team.

Defending Champ's Error Helps Russian Grab Title

STRASBOURG, France (Reuter) — Nikolai Andrianov of the Soviet Union has added the world gymnastics men's individual crown to his Olympic title won at Montreal in 1976.

The victory Friday night was particularly sweet for the Soviet men following their defeat by Japan in the team competition Wednesday for the fifth straight time in world competition.

Japan's defending individual champion, Shigeru Kasamatsu, ruined his chances to repeat at the start of competition by falling midway through his pommel horse routine, a discipline that requires control and strength.

The 31-year-old Japanese veteran received only 8.9 points of 10 for the exercise and fell from contention, finishing seventh over all.

Andrianov showed consistency in his routines—his lowest mark was a 9.7 on the pommel horse—and finished off on the rings with his best—9.9. He collected 117.200 points in the individual competition.

As the capacity crowd recognized his performance with a standing ovation, the Soviet champion saluted, confident that he had captured the gold.

Another Japanese, Eizo Kenmotsu, gold medallist in the 1970 worlds and a bronze medallist in 1974, took the second-place silver with exceptional performances on the rings and vault and 116.550 points. Aleksandre Detiatin of the Soviet Union place third here with 116.375 points.

The only two Canadians in the all-round men's competition, Montrealers Warren Long and Jean Choquette, placed 28th and 35th respectively. Long, currently living in Berkeley, Calif., collected 112.125 points and Choquette had 110.550.

Neither Canadian actually qualified for the all-round competition, placing 36th and 41st in the individual placings during earlier team events. But because no country can qualify more than three competitors for the all-round finals, they were elevated to the top 35.

Canada's top gymnast, Philip Delesalle of Victoria, was scratched from the competition earlier in the week when he came down with influenza.

Kasamatsu's blunder on the first exercise was a bitter blow for the Japanese star since he was well-placed for a gold at the time with excellent showings in the voluntary and compulsory exercises earlier in the week. He had been second over all in both the pommel horse and horizontal parallel bars.

West German Eberhard Gienger, a bronze medallist in horizontal bars at the Montreal Olympics, held on for fourth place over Hiroji Kajiyama of Japan by scoring 9.80 in his final exercise.

INDIVIDUAL LEADERS

1. N. Andrianov, Russia 117.200 points
2. Eizo Kenmotsu, Japan 116.550
3. Alek. Detiatin, Russia 116.375
4. E. Gienger, W. Germany, 116.200
5. Hiroji Kajiyama, Japan 115.900
6. Kurt Thomas, U.S. 115.725
7. Shigeru Kasamatsu, Japan 115.625
8. Stoian Deltchev, Bulgaria 115.225
9. Bart Conner, U.S. 115.200
10. Mich. Nikolav, E. Germ. 115.175
28. Warren Long, Montreal 112.125
35. Jean Choquette, Montreal 110.550

WALLIS, ANDREW BOWLERS OF WEEK

High middle games helped May Wallis and Ron Andrew earn fivepin laurels at Town and Country Lanes during the third week of competition in the 16th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

May picked up the women's award with a 294 effort sandwiched between a start of 276 and a finishing game of 281 for a division-topping 851 series in the Monday Classic League.

Ron captured the men's prize with a blistering 352 game between 318 and 299 efforts for a 969 series in the Wednesday Majors League.

McLendon Opens Five-Stroke Lead

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Mac McLendon appears on his way to his second victory on the PGA tour this year, but he isn't counting the $25,000 first prize, even with a five-stroke lead at the halfway point of the Pensacola Open golf tournament.

"The way the tour is today, I don't think any lead is safe," McLendon said after a five-under-par 67 Friday for a 36-hole total of 132.

Eager young challengers Keith Fergus and D. A. Weibring agree with McLendon's assessment. They are at 137, along with Seattle's Mike Reasor.

Said Weibring: "He's in a good position, but we're only halfway through and there's a lot of golf left."

"Anybody can be caught," Fergus agreed.

George Knudson of Toronto shot a second-round 70 for a two-round total of 141, tying him with Andy Bean.

Only the 73 golfers who shot par 144 or better made the final 36 holes. Casualties included Hubert Green, at 148, Bill Kratzert, at 150, and Jerry Pate, at 147.

Legion, Gulls Play to 3-3 Tie

Goaltenders Gord Draibye of Esquimalt Legion and Peter Adamek of Juan de Fuca Gulls both turned in strong performances Friday as their teams settled for a 3-3 draw in South Island Junior "B" Hockey League action at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Draibye made 30 saves, Adamek 35.

Murray Allen scored twice while Terry Parsons hit for one Esquimalt goal. Mike Milligan, Dave Kjolberg and Bob Grant were Juan de Fuca marksmen.

Buttons Play Starts Sunday

The Victoria District Golf Committee's button matches, designed to forment good competition during the winter months, get under way Sunday at Gorge Vale.

Grant Milliken and Dave Donaldson of Gorge Vale will defend the open buttons against the Cedar Hill combination of Greg Barnes and Fred Worthington, starting at 10:30 a.m.

Don Singlehurst and Glen Barlow of Royal Colwood will meet a Cedar Hill pairing, to be announced, for the junior buttons.

Eucharist subject of conference

The Roman Catholic Diocese of Victoria is sponsoring an important two-day conference entitled We Celebrate the Eucharist next month for which registrations close Monday.

The event, Nov. 24 and 25, will be at the Island Hall Hotel, Parksville, and is an intensive institute designed especially for priests, teachers and parents who are convinced that the preparation of children for the sacraments is a responsibility to be shared by the home, school and parish and that such moments in the life of a family and of a Christian community offer a unique opportunity for spiritual growth, conversion and building of community.

Directing the two-day institute will be Dr. Christiane Brusselmans, an internationally recognized religious educator who has pioneered the concept of parental involvement in preparing children for the sacraments.

Dr. Brusselmans has been professor of theology at Louvain University, Belgium, and taught at Catholic University, Washington, North American College, Rome, Fordham and Harvard Divinity School.

Registration and tuition fees are $25 a person or $40 for a married couple. Pre-registration is necessary before Oct. 31.

For information, phone or call Office of Religious Education, 301 Machleary, Nanaimo, 754-2515. Room reservations to be made directly with Island Hall Hotel, 248-3225.

Milestone for Knox

This coming week marks a major milestone in the history of Knox Presbyterian Church, Sooke, which within a three-day period will celebrate its 80th anniversary and induct a new minister.

Rev. Larry Lin will be inducted at a 7:30 p.m. service Friday at a service conducted by the Vancouver Island Presbytery of the church. Anniversary celebrations will be part of the regular morning service Nov. 5, with former minister Dr. E.A. Wright guest preacher. Former members and adherents of the church are invited to the service and ensuing social hour.

The original church was opened Oct. 30, 1898.

A new church was planned in 1951, with the first service held at Christmas, 1955.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

Within the broad, variegated field of Christian thought today there are three general attitudes toward science.

First, there is the attitude of extreme conservatism. The champions of this position assume that if scientific findings and hypotheses cannot somehow be battered into consistency with narrowly biblical concepts of "truth," concepts established in simple biblical literalism, they must be dismissed as "science falsely so called."

These doughty warriors are still fighting Darwin and other scientific thinkers of the Victorian age. Intellectually they are the contemporaries of those frightened Victorian theologians who assumed that to take Darwin and the others seriously was to betray the faith. The controversy of a century or so ago—which still burns in some circles—was not much to the credit of science either.

But from the start there were faithful Christian thinkers who saw that, although the findings and hypotheses of Darwin and other scientists did challenge some ideas which adhered to Christian thought, they did not necessarily menace the great centralities of the faith.

The second Christian approach to science is that of extreme theological liberalism. Here it is assumed that theology must be trimmed and tidied to fit the currently fashionable scientific patterns of thought. Theology is to be adjusted to make it accord with edicts issued in the name of science, edicts which may or may not have scientific authenticity. Fumbling attempts to cut the cloth of religion to fit some utterly transitory expression of science must seem very amusing to the thoughful scientist. (As James Thurber once observed, "You might as well fall flat on your face as lean over too far backward.")

The third attitude which the Christian thinker can take toward science is that of constructive co-existence. Dr. Gordon W. Allport, a psychologist who wrote wisely on the relations between religion and science, put it in this way: "Since we cannot and will not turn our backs on the modern world, then the religion we embrace cannot be pre-scientific; nor anti-scientific; it must be co-scientific."

But can the scientist accept this approach of constructive co-existence? Or must he, because he is a scientist, reject all traditional religious perspectives? Many scientists, of course, do reject religion. And many scientists take the way of religious faith—and without feeling that by doing so they are compromising their scientific and intellectual integrity. Surely this issue cannot be settled on the basis of either religious dogmas or dogmas uttered in the name of science.

The one claim sometimes made in the name of science that religion must always challenge is the claim that there can be no avenues to truth and understanding and wisdom except those which can be discovered, marked out and validated by science. It is one of the quaintest of dogmatisms to insist that such claims are themselves scientifically verifiable.

(Dr. Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa).

Sunday glad day for Glad Tidings congregation

Sunday will be a glad day for the congregation of Glad Tidings Pentecostal Church, 842 North Park Street, when dedication of the new $1.1 million church will take place.

The public is invited to a special opening ceremony at 8 p.m. Saturday at which noted soprano soloist Mrs. Chris Hansen Monson will give a concert.

Mrs. Monson will also appear at the 10 a.m. family service Sunday, the 2 p.m. service of dedication and at the 7 p.m. evening service.

Pastor Rev. Edmund Austin said this week that the opening ceremonies will end several years of planning and a year of construction. The original church, once a labor union office, was purchased by local members of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada in 1938 and has grown from within and without to its present size.

The new building, which is supported by glue-laminated beams stretching 135 feet and weighing 15 tons each, will seat 1,100 people with ease, Austin said.

Glad Tidings had its beginnings in Victoria following a city-wide evangelical campaign by the late Dr. Charles Price in 1923.

Initially located downtown, the congregation moved to its present location just over 40 years ago.

Steady growth of the fundamentalist church, affiliated with the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada, part of a world-wide movement, has enabled the church to "mother" several daughter churches in the area as well as to expand landholdings.

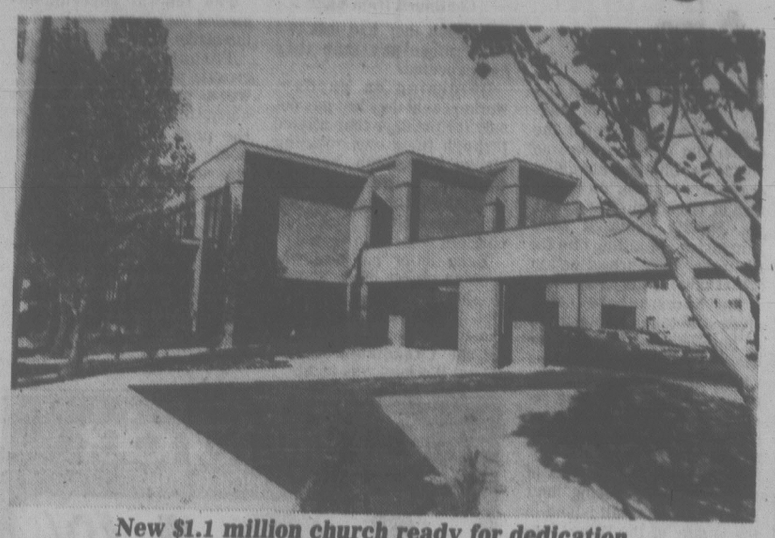

In 1975 the church built Bethany Court, a 67-suite senior citizens complex, on North Park.

Architect for the new church was Vern Delgatty of Burnaby, and contractor was W. Campbell Ltd. of Victoria.

The old union office, built in 1912, will be remodelled to provide Christian education, recreation and activity space areas.

At the 2 p.m. dedication service Sunday, guest speaker will be Rev. R. Tattinger, general superintendent of Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada.

Others appearing will include MLAs Charles Barber, Hugh Curtis, Allan McKinnon, MP, and Ald. Larry Ryan.

New $1.1 million church ready for dedication

Women plan workshop

The Ecumenical Women's Outreach of Victoria is planning a fall workshop on Tuesday from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at Grace Lutheran Church, 1273 Fort, to which women of all denominations are very cordially invited to attend.

The theme of the workshop "Today's Woman in Today's World," will study issues of concern to women in today's society to enable them to share their potential and responsibility as Christians in action.

Guest speakers with a good knowledge of each issue will speak for about 20 minutes on each subject and a short 'buzz session' will follow each segment.

Isobel Craig will speak on the career woman in her chosen vocation; Doreen Pelkey — the native woman, her recognition and rights; Joy Conway on the woman and addiction; Wilma Thomas on the positive value maturity brings, with Mrs. Hughes a gentle-woman of four-score and maby more sharing with us how she fills her days.

Mrs. Dorthy Parry, Chairwoman of the E.W.O., who has just returned from a consultation of the Inter-Church Council of Canada in Ontario, will end the program with a short resume on her experiences.

Women will bring box lunches to share and will enjoy a sing-a-long with David Adams."

Goblins for good

Not all the children roaming the streets on Halloween week will be evil-looking goblins, spacemen or tramps. Some will be uniformed Seventh Day Adventist Pathfinders collecting food for the needy.

Every year, Adventist school children omit Halloween antics for the good of others. Last year some 1,000 cans of food were collected and returned to the needy in the community at Christmas time in good-will hampers.

"The co-educational Pathfinders has been an integral part of the Adventist church youth program for more than 30 years, according to church spokesman Kathlene Piper. "It is similar to the Scout movement."

Pathfinders are not associated with UNICEF, the United Nation's Halloween collection program which solicits money for overseas relief. Adventist collections stay largely at home.

However, for those other masqueraded goblins who will be calling on doors in your city, may we appeal that you give "good grub" rather than junk food for greedy goblins.

Temple's members generous

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 1,000 members of the Glad Tidings Temple are more generous than their pastor ever prayed for.

Rev. Maureen Gaglardi said in an interview she set out two months ago to raise $1 million from her congregation by Sept. 10 to expand church facilities.

Miss Gaglardi said she discussed the fund-raising with her congregation, held prayer meetings and several days of fasting.

When Sept. 10 came, she got $2,014,000 in individual pledges.

"In the morning offering we got $1,943,000 and some hundreds," she said. "We got about another $100,000 in the evening offering."

She said the contributions ranged from 50 cents to the the largest of $500,000, adding that her congregation includes "three wealthy people."

CHURCH CHRONICLES

Actor's craft aids understanding

Jones

Richard Litt, actor and director, will present dramatic impersonations of famous, infamous and unknown persons at the 10:30 a.m. service Sunday at the Unitarian Church, 106 Superior.

The subjects will deal with basic human problems, their causes and the solutions that seemed appropriate to generations past.

Litt is well known for his conviction that drama is a powerful instrument in developing our thoughts and feelings. He is also widely recognized for the high quality of his professional skills.

Project North will hold two meetings in early November.

The first meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 5, in Anglican Church Hall, 3rd St., Sidney, and the second at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 6, in Sacred Heart Church Hall, 4040 Nelthorpe St., Victoria.

Both meetings will feature speakers from the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, who will discuss the Master Tuition Agreement, the plan by which federal money is paid for the education of native Indian children in the public school system. Presentation title is Education—They Speak, We Listen.

Speakers include Philip Paul, Rosalie Tyzia, Louise Mandell and Millie Poplar.

Purpose of the meeting is to discuss the best possible use of the federal funds. Refreshments will be served.

Robert Pierson, president of the general conference of Seventh-day Adventists, has announced in Washington, D.C., that he will leave office Jan. 3, his 68th birthday.

The world leader of the church, which has a congregation in Victoria at 983 Pandora, gave health reasons for quitting before his five-year term ends in 1980.

Edward Jones of Vancouver has been named chairman of the Christian Science committee on publication for B.C., succeeding John Rennie of Victoria who held the position since 1975.

The assignment provides an information office to which public officials, students, journalists and others may turn with questions about Christian Science.

B.C. has 25 Christian Science congregations, one of them in Victoria at 1205 Pandora. Founded in 1879, the Church of Christ, Scientist, has branches in some 57 countries.

A native of Wyoming, Jones served as a church representative to Christian Science college and university organizations in northwestern U.S. and Canada from 1972 to 1974. In 1973 he entered the full-time practice of Christian Science healing.

The committee on publication office is at 470 Granville, Vancouver.

Country singer Johnny Cash says of his film Gospel Road: "It's the reason I'm on this earth." The idea of producing a musical account of the life of Jesus Christ occurred to Cash and his wife, June Carter, about seven years ago.

After years of planning, prayer and hard work, the result is a powerful motion picture capturing the emotion in the events of the life of Jesus. Filmed in color on location, Gospel Road restates the realities of Christ's life on earth in realistic and incredibly human terms.

Gospel Road will be shown at Oldfield Road Gospel Chapel, corner of Oldfield at Old West Saanich Roads at 7 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free and everyone is welcome, says pastor, Rev. Ken Finstad.

Victoria Chapter, Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship, will hold a breakfast meeting from 8:20-11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 4, at the Oak Bay Marina dining room.

There will be songs, praise and testimonies from Victoria area men. Come and enjoy the Christian fellowship and bring a friend. Cost is $2.75 complete. To reserve a seat phone George at 385-5425 or Allan at 595-2274.

An independent charismatic conference will be held at Holyrood House, 2315 Blanshard, Oct. 31—Nov. 3 each evening at 7:30.

Speaker Roman Krywyn will talk on Learning to excell in the gifts of the Holy Spirit.

Krywyn has travelled widely among charismatics in Canada and the United States, accompanied by his wife and two children.

Hobbies, art work and crafts by members of Oak Bay United Church will be displayed the weekend of Nov. 3 and 4, and the public is invited to see what the congregation collects, creates and makes.

The event at Oak Bay United Church, Mitchell and Granite, is sponsored by the men's club. The third annual show will be on Friday from 7 to 9:30 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Some items are for sale. Admission is free.

A joint Lutheran service, with participants from all Lutheran churches in Victoria, will be held Sunday, Reformation Day, at 10:30 a.m. at McPherson Playhouse.

The public is welcome to attend.

Soviets Downed Plane, Now Bill Pan Am

Paris to Seoul via a refueling stop in Anchorage, Alaska, when the Korean flight crew apparently became disoriented in the little-travelled airlanes near the North Pole and turned south toward the Soviet Union instead of continuing east to Alaska.

Soviet diplomatic sources Thursday reiterated their country's concern at the time that the plane was a disguised intelligence craft about to flee to safety in nearby Finland after probing the Murmansk defences. They said that the Russians, who detained the Korean pilot and navigator for a week of interrogation, have accepted the notion that the intrusion was accidental blunder, not deliberate provocation. As a gesture of friendship, they said, the Soviets released pilot Kim instead of jailing him for the three years prescribed in Soviet law for his actions.

The Koreans have never given a detailed explanation of how or why the aircrew became disoriented. It is widely thought here that inattention to the demanding requirements of transpolar navigation caused the plane to stray.

Meanwhile, the remains of the four-engine Boeing liner now rest on a small island in the middle of the lake where Kim landed the plane. The Soviets dragged it there before the ice melted in the spring thaw. Informed Western sources said the Soviets have removed the tail and engines.

The craft is said to be a complete loss. It is believed the Soviets eventually will dismantle it completely. They still retain the cockpit recording devices that could help clear up the mysterious misfortune of flight 902.

Post Office Suspensions, Skirmishes

day found they had lost two days' more pay than they had expected.

Returning on payday, workers said they lost pay not only for the days they missed through their own rotating strikes last month, but also for the first two days of the strike by inside postal workers, whose picket lines most carriers refused to cross.

Even letter carriers who crossed picket lines, phoned in sick or were on holiday Oct. 16 and 17 lost wages for the two days that the strike by the Canadian Union of Postal Workers was legal.

The federal government passed legislation outlawing the strike later that week.

Toronto carriers who crossed picket lines said they were particularly angry about the pay loss because the post office sent them home Oct. 17 because there was no work to do.

"How would you feel?" asked one letter carrier in an interview. "First you put up with all this strike business and then when you go in . . . the boss gives you a pay cheque that's $107 short."

The man said workers complained to a supervisor but the complaint would take about three months to process.

In a related development, Andy Stewart, president of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, said Friday that "if the experience of CUPW is symptomatic of what the rest of us in the public sector can expect, then God help us, brothers and sisters, because we are in a hell of a lot of trouble."

Prime Minister Trudeau also has announced plans to reintroduce a controversial bill that would tie public sector wage increases to those in the private sector through the use of a comparability formula.

Article Clarified

One part of an article this week on the attempted murder trial of Jeno Robert Lipcsei, 43, appears to have caused some confusion.

It was reported that Deborah Acheson, a lawyer in the firm of Stevenson, Doell and Company, where the attack occurred on Mrs. Martha Lipcsei July 18, said she didn't see any indication of injury to his face then but the "next day, in court" his face was bruised and he had a black eye.

The phrase "next day" referred, of course, to his condition July 19 when he first appeared in court, and not to the next day in this week's trial.

Good Shepherds Struggling

Screwball, Chubby and Dirty Face peered out at me.

The furry three were new arrivals yet it was almost as if somehow they realized the plight of Mother Cecilia and Sister Julia and the two or three helpers who keep the Good Shepherd Shelter in Mill Bay struggling along.

Few humans probably realize their plight and fewer still know just what a struggle it has been lately.

I found out when a reader sent me a copy of a rather sad report from the Shelter recently. More people, at least those who care for animals, should be aware of what's happening, the reader suggested, and perhaps be able to do something.

What's happening is that the haven for lost and unwanted animals which the two nuns have run — at first in Saanich, then Metchosin and finally in Mill Bay — for nearly 20 years, is broke.

"Right now, we have 293 abandoned dogs at the shelter, all known by name and character," the report

max low

said. "As well, we have 11 long-term dog boarders, 20 horses (many of which were saved from being made into dog food), nine goats, a boarding pig (which is bigger than my double bed!), numerous cats and kittens, approximately 200 chickens, various geese, ducks, guinea hens, rabbits, hamsters, a boarding monkey and a chinchilla."

Plenty of animals but no money.

"At the end of August, we can report that we now have about $50 in the bank," the report said. "Wages have been kept down as best we can; it is now we want to ask mercy for the animals."

What the nuns do have, of course, is plenty of faith.

"Let us now turn to our Father in Heaven and place our petitions," they said. "Dear Lord, You ask us to care for the animals. This we have tried to do. We long to carry out your request. We turn to You in our plea for the animals. Help us to help them . . ."

The report, plus pages of the last editorials to be penned by Mother Cecilia, contained even more heart-rending prose and was to have been sent to some 3,000 animal lovers on the shelter's mailing list. But the mail strike didn't help.

"We only got about 700 sent out before it hit us," Sister Julia told me when I called in the other day. "Still, those who did receive it sent in $10 to help out instead of maybe $5.

"We have been able to meet the salaries (there are usually four or five part-time workers headed by [illegible] who look after the animals) but we haven't been able to pay a big bill at the feed store nor the veterinarian.

"We're just sort of living from day to day . . . hoping that something will happen."

THEIR BIG NEED IS COLD CASH

What has happened is that Mother Cecilia — the maverick nun who 20 years ago next March took in Chris, the first of her horde of dogs, and then defied the Vatican by devoting the rest of her life to looking after animals instead of people — turned 90 in May. Though she was up for her birthday, she's bedridden now and very frail and is unable to continue with her writing.

That chore, as well as many others, has been taken over by Sister Julia, a self-confessed sports fan ("specially baseball") who insists though, that Mother Cecilia is still in control.

"She has over-worked over the years and this has caused a physical weakness but it's only physical," explains Sister Julia, who has been with the shelter since it started and with Mother Cecilia for 23 years. "I still go to her for all the business decisions."

Over the years, Mother Cecilia has faced her share of criticism for running what is believed to be the only animal shelter in Canada and perhaps the only one in the world that doesn't put animals to sleep but finds homes for about 50 per cent of them and gives the others a home there until they die naturally.

"There are people who find fault with us because we do not put some of the animals to sleep in order to reduce the number and work," she said in a recent editorial.

"The family of animals was brought here because they were destitute and not wanted. If animals can think that way, they must feel they have entered Heaven. Some of them have seen cruelty and starvation. Should it end with murder, do you think?"

Ironically, the report that went out stressed not only a shortage of money but a need for more volunteer help, yet what the shelter got was more animals!

"Animals have been pouring in since the report," said Sister Julia.

And, because the shelter is the only one of its kind, pet-lovers who have to part with their pet but can't bear the thought of having it put to sleep, send it to Mill Bay — no matter how far away they live.

"People who don't want their pets destroyed know they'll be looked after here and so they send them," Sister Julia explained.

"Look in here, these cats are all from Ontario," she said, opening a door to a room where 20 or so are under observation. "These cats are from Quebec," she added as we moved on to a cottage where a dozen or more females were waiting to be spayed before being allowed to roam the 58-acre property.

And then, as we moved through the centre of a huge barn housing the dogs, I met three of the most beautiful huskies you've ever seen, flown down from the Northwest Territories because their owner could no longer keep them yet didn't want them to die.

Yes, you guessed it . . . Screwball, Chubby and Dirty Face.

Inner Harbor Proposal Forces Empress Hotel To Stall On Expansion

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The Empress Hotel has shelved plans to expand its own convention facilities, manager Ted Balderson has revealed.

His announcement came after plans were made public for a proposed convention centre on the Inner Harbor.

The proposal for a trade and exhibit complex on the Reid site, includes a 16,000 square foot convention hall.

Balderson said the proposed facility could handle convention banquets of upwards of 1,200 people.

By contrast, the largest meeting hall in the Empress — the Crystal Ballroom — is 6,000 square feet and has a maximum banquet capacity of 500.

"Our plan to expand the Crystal Ballroom has been placed on the back burner," Balderson said.

"There will be no action on it this year and maybe not for a long time.

"The new convention centre would not be direct competition for the Empress. We would complement each other," he said.

"We would still host small conventions and would provide (sleeping) rooms for people coming to the larger convention hall."

If the new convention hall becomes a reality, The Empress will specialize in conventions in the range of 200 to 500 while the new hall will attract most meetings larger than that.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf this week outlined a proposal to ask private enterprise to construct the $5 million trade and exhibit complex on provincial government waterfront property.

The provincial government would donate the land and Victoria city would pay for a 250-car underground parking facility.

Bawlf said he would recommend that a trade and convention bureau be formed to lease and operate the convention hall.

This job likely would fall to the Visitors Information Centre, which operates the Causeway tourist office.

Balderson, who is also president of the Visitors Information Centre, said the Bawlf plan could give Victoria the type of organized convention marketing that is available in larger centres.

"The Visitors Information Centre is the logical group to form the trade and convention bureau. The last thing Victoria needs is another new group to get involved in the tourist business. This is something that we (the VIC) should logically be handling.

"We would like to obtain further information on the proposal and discuss how we can help."

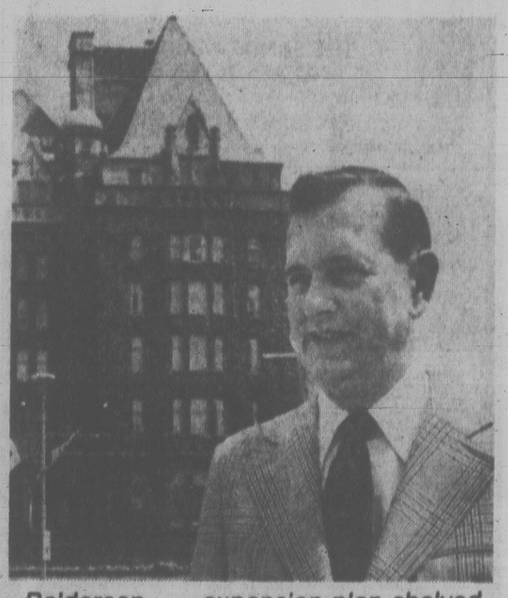

Balderson said Edmonton pays for its convention deficits through its business tax.

When convention marketing was proposed there, the city's business tax was increased to 11 per cent from 10 per cent, with the extra money earmarked to support convention operations.

"They had a good-sized fund in the bank before they started. This is something we should look at for Victoria."

In addition to the convention hall, the proposed complex would contain 45,000 square feet of retail space, including a centre offering seafood, fresh produce and food specialities and more than an acre of open space for plazas, promenades and roof gardens.

Mayor Mike Young said he will recommend to city council it approve the plan.

Batvan Blitz Starts

The first night of a weekend, province-wide blitz on drinking drivers netted three impaired motorists in the Greater Victoria area.

A police spokesman said four other motorists were handed 24-hour suspensions as officers stopped close to 800 vehicles Friday night in a series of roadblocks concentrated mainly in the Esquimalt and Saanich areas.

The Breathalyzer Analysis Testing (BAT) van is out again tonight but police are not saying where.

This weekend all 17 BAT vans in the province are being put into service in one of three concentrated attacks organized under the attorney-general ministry's Counter Attack program.

The other two blitzes are scheduled for the weekends starting March 16 and May 25.

Road checks, which have been operated throughout the year in the Greater Victoria area will be stepped up in December with greatest emphasis on the period between Christmas and New Year.

Crash Driver Charged

Five people were hurt when a speeding car being chased by police hit another car head-on early today on King George Terrace.

Oak Bay police said a charge of dangerous driving has been laid against Thomas Frederick Ward, 20, of 2610 Beach Drive, the driver of one of the cars.

He is in fairly good condition in Royal Jubilee with injuries to his jaw and chin.

The driver of the other car, Martin Naucier, 18, of 1918 Wenman, and three passengers, Cameron Anderson, 18, Lorraine Leon, 16, and Brian Kaiser, 18, were treated and released.

Panama Flats Farming Stirs Residents' Fears

Saanich residents who live overlooking the Panama Flats are worried that extensive farming of the property may eventually result in the loss of a valuable wildlife habitat and affect Colquitz Creek.

The 50-acre property was sold a month ago to Saanich alderman and farmer Geoff Vantright.

It was formerly owned by William Edge, of Carey Road.

The Vantreights are digging holding ditches to drain the land and to conserve water during the summer months. One of the ditches is located close to Colquitz Creek.

Panama Flats is a flood plain in the winter months and during this period it's a refuge for geese and all species of marsh birds.

It's also a favorite skating area during freeze-ups.

A federal fisheries spokesman said they were concerned at first that sediment from one water holding ditch would escape into Colquitz Creek but were assured that this would not happen.

"However, we have warned the owners that this must not happen," he said.

Dr. Robert Langford, an environmental biologist for Saanich, said he does not believe the ditches will affect the birds in winter.

However, some residents think the ditches will eventually effect the ecology of the area and they're disappointed that Saanich did not buy the land.

Neil West, of Carey Road, said people were given to understand that the land would be bought by Saanich.

"All of a sudden it is sold," he said.

"Council never announced it had an offer to buy the property. We were kept in the dark."

Edge said he offered the land to Saanich for use as a park or greenbelt area but was turned down.

"They said they had no use for it and no money as well," Edge said.

Edge said he farmed only part of the land up to a few years ago then rented it to a dairy farmer.

Arkell Seeks Seat On Board

A Burnside parent who wants to see better co-ordination of counselling services in the schools, improved libraries and greater emphasis on long-term planning has thrown his hat in the ring for one of five seats on the Greater Victoria school board.

Arkell joins Winfield Mott, a Capital Region District employee, in challenging incumbents Susan Brice, Peter Dorazio, Bud Smith and Peter Yorke in the Nov. 18 elections. The fifth incumbent, Dr. Mark Fisher, has not yet said whether he'll run again.

Arkell, a bookkeeper for Cigas, has been active at both Burnside and S.J. Wills schools. He represented Burnside elementary parents last spring in board hearings on plans to close down the school.

In Sooke, too, a contest is looming, with the entry of Don Stansall in the Milne Landing zone held by incumbent school board chairman Horst Doniecki who will be trying for a fourth term.

The other Sooke incumbent Irene Lane is undeclared. If she runs she will face at least two opponents, Roy Holder, 31, of Langford and Leif Wergeland, 37, of Colwood.

In the Saanich school district incumbents Gerry Kristianson and Walter Tangye announced Friday their intentions to run again.

Gov't Shares Gag Ad Bill

The ad in the Seattle paper said: Hurry! Come to Cowichan Bay — before the provincial government lets private industry destroy it.

The funny part is the provincial government shared the costs of the ad.

Among those still trying to see the funny side is Ted Grigg, the Vancouver representative of the Post-Intelligencer, who approved it.

"I didn't realize the ad was a joke when I sent it to Seattle," Grigg said in an interview today.

"There was a whole bunch of ads and it was a big rush. And I didn't know anything about the Cowichan estuary controversy — but I sure do now!"

The incident began when the provincial government urged anyone in the tourist business to participate in a special B.C. advertising section in the Seattle paper. Companies were told to phone Grigg's number in Vancouver.

The Cowichan Estuary Preservation Society decided, as a joke, to offer an advertisement attacking government policy.

Ann Holden, spokesperson for the group, said she was surprised but delighted when the ad was accepted.

Grigg was on the other end of the phone.

"I was really busy and the ad read: Hurry-Hurry-Hurry! Come to Cowichan Bay. It seemed to be all right so I sent it through."

But the ad continues: "The B.C. government is considering allowing industry to continue to spread in this important, valuable estuary, thus destroying the very thing you, as a tourist, may be seeking."

The ad was one of a number placed above a large provincial government advertisement on the Capt. Cook bicentennial festival.

Grace McCarthy, who developed the co-op tourist ad program, is out of town and unavailable for comment.

Michael Powell, spokesman for the government's ad agency, McKim Advertising Ltd., said the company did not see the ad before it went to Seattle.

Under the co-op ad program, each B.C. group pays for its own advertising but gets a special rate because of the large government advertisement accompanying it.

LOST TROLLER STILL SOUGHT

A search for the 28-foot troller Neptune — believed to have left Port Hardy on Saturday with owner Bill Carson and another couple aboard — is continuing over a wide area of the B.C. coastline.

A spokesman for the RCMP in Port Hardy said searchers are concentrating on two areas, around Powell River and in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

"The problem is we just don't know where they went," the spokesman said.

A friend of Carson, however, said Carson and the couple left in the Neptune to fish at Shushartie Bay in Goleta Channel near Bull Harbor.

The friend went to Shusharti Bay and after failing to find the vessel, notified search and rescue authorities.

The spokesman said every harbor between Vancouver and Prince Rupert has been checked and every area and island given an air search at least twice.

You Cannot Die, This Writer Claims

TORONTO (CP) — Ghosts, possession by spirits, out-of-the-body experiences and reincarnation not only are possible, but are commonplace, says a University of Guelph sociology professor who has written a book on such things based on the scientific research of other academics.

Ian Currie says that research for his book, You Cannot Die, to be published in the next few weeks, led him to four inescapable conclusions:

—Human beings survive physical death;

—They continue to exist after death at varying levels of awareness and creativity;

—They are reincarnated periodically;

—Successive reincarnations do not occur at random, but appear to be linked.

Currie was a skeptic when he first became interested in the paranormal, but a need for a sense of meaning deepened his interest after a while, he says.

Since then he has found he has no psychic powers, but has experienced what he calls regression to earlier existences, one of them as the beautiful Arab mistress of a Roman military official in pre-Christian Lebanon.

His first regression happened in Detroit, Mich., where he attended a clinic run by Dr. Helen Wambach, a California clinical psychologist who has studied thousands of regressions.

Guided by Dr. Wambach, Currie said, he found himself in a desert with tents and a villa in the background.

"Then I crossed my hands over my body and I realized. . . I was a very attractive female of about 18, with long black hair."

During another regression, led by a Toronto psychic, Currie said he experienced six previous embodiments. In one he was a First World War soldier who was bayoneted while serving in the trenches.

Describing a personal encounter with a possessed man, Currie said he was approached after a lecture at a Canadian university by a man named David who told him a dead woman took possession of his body and sent him on homosexual binges.

"She was able to use his body to induce him to have sex with males, which she found gratifying and he, later, devastating," Currie writes.

Secretary-Lover Describes The End of Marion Affair

MONTREAL (CP) — Charles Marion's former secretary and mistress wept in court Friday as she described her long relationship with the credit union executive who spent 82 days in captivity after being kidnapped last year near Sherbrooke, Que.

Aline Yergeau, 39, an employee of the Caisse Populaire de Sherbrooke Est, where Marion was loans manager, was testifying for the second day in Quebec Superior Court at the kidnapping trial of Sherbrooke land evaluator Claude Valence and his wife Jeanne.

The Valences are charged with conspiring with Michel de Varenne to kidnap Marion, kidnapping, forcibly detaining the loans manager, attempted extortion involving the Caisse Populaire, and extortion.

Miss Yergeau, who returned to work at the credit union two months after Marion was freed by his abductors Oct. 27, 1977, told the court their 10-year affair ended abruptly with a five-minute telephone call from Marion's hospital bed.

"He called me Oct. 29, 1977, from the hospital where he had been taken after being freed," said Miss Yergeau, who was with Marion at his summer cottage at Stoke, just outside Sherbrooke, when the abduction took place Aug. 6, 1977.

"I tried calling him back, but was not able to talk to him. His wife forbade me."

Miss Yergeau did not mention details of her short telephone conversation with Marion, but said: "Our relationship ended there."

She told the jury of seven women and five men that the only other contact she has had with Marion since that time was on Aug. 31 when "I accidentally met him while walking on the sidewalk. He was alone but we didn't speak."

She said she had received no correspondence from her former boss, with whom she had worked for 20 years.

She told the court that two armed and masked men confronted her and Marion while they were at the cottage on the evening of Aug. 6, 1977.

"The younger of the two men tied me to the toilet bowl and put a hood over Chrles' head," she said.

"Then they taped the hood shut around his neck." She asked Marion if he could breathe and "he answered 'yes, yes', but did not ask me anything or try to comfort me."

She said she was found about 20 hours later by Marion's wife, who was worried about her husband and had come from Sherbrooke to check the house.

Miss Yergeau did not work again for four months and, she said, "spent four months in the house waiting.

"I couldn't leave the house because of the publicity surrounding the affair."

The trial continues.

Callous Cabbie Has to Pay $22,551 Injury Award

MONTREAL (CP) — A taxi driver who failed to assist a handicapped customer out of his cab was ordered Friday to pay $22,551 for injuries suffered by the passenger in 1972.

Quebec Superior Court Justice Fernand Legault reuled the passenger, Metiuk Choulgine of Ottawa, was dragged by a taxi driven by Adelard Lavigne after getting out of the cab and catching his coat in the door.

Choulgine, a CBC employee, was completely disabled by the accident on Dec. 15, 1972, the judge noted, but later died from unrelated causes.

Mr. Justice Legault said it was apparent the victim walked with difficulty with a cane, and ruled Lavigne showed a complete lack of prodence, particularly in view of Choulgine's physical condition.

The damages were awarded to the victim's heirs.

Pensions Hike Nod

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation increasing income supplements for 1.3 million pensioners received approval in principle in the Commons Friday with all parties supporting it.

The opposition complained that the legislation does not go far enough in helping the elderly and said it supported it because it was better than nothing.

The legislation would increase by $20 a month the guaranteed income supplement which poor pensioners can receive on passing a means test.

The supplement is added to the old-age security benefit of $159.79 that is paid to everyone over age 65.

The bill also will extend for six months a spouses allowance that now is immediately suspended on the death of the pensioner spouses.

James McGrath (PC—St. John's East), Conservative social affairs spokesman, and other Conservatives said the spouses allowance should not be cut once it is started.

He was challenged by Health Minister Monique Begin and other Liberals to say where the money will come from.

She said $4.8 billion is paid in pensions a year already. The legislation would add another $300 million to this. How much more were the Conservatives prepared to spend?

McGrath replied that his party puts no price on the justice of extending the spouses allowance.

Jake Epp (PC—Provencher) said Miss Begin cannot "convince me in any way that she is satisfied with the bill but it is the best she could do."

New Brunswick Liberal Herb Breau defended his government's social security policies, saying the opposition parties are guilty of adopting hypocritical stands.

Breau said at a time when government must become more involved in programs of social assistance the opposition parties continue to take stands on both sides of the issue.

The proposed changes, first announced during the late summer, require parliamentary approval before they come into effect.

Bid Rigging Detailed In Dredge Testimony

TORONTO (CP) — The president of Canadian Dredge and Dock Co. Ltd. testified Friday that he was involved in two cases of bid-rigging in 1972, but said he had done nothing similar before or since.

Colin Fairn told an Ontario Supreme Court jury that he was not directly involved in one of the cases.

And in the other case, he said he did not think there was anything wrong in submitting an artificially high bid because Canadian Dredge and Dock stood little chance of getting the contract anyway.

Fairn said that both cases of bid-rigging occurred in the summer and fall of 1972 while he was a chief engineer with Canadian Dredge and Dock. He said the company president at the time was Robert Schneider, who has since been fired.

In one case, Fairn said he received a telephone call from an officer of McNamara Corp. Ltd., another of the dredging companies on trial, asking whether Canadian Dredge and Dock intended to bid on a job for Pioneer Grain in Thunder Bay, Ont.

He said Canadian Dredge and Dock was not capable of competing for the job because most of its equipment was not available, but that Schneider gave instructions to co-operate with McNamara by submitting an inflated bid amounting to 10 per cent of the contract.

Fairn said he was later given a figure by the McNamara man at which to bid for the Pioneer Grain job.

The second case of bid-rigging involved a dredging job at Toronto harbor in October, 1972, Fairn said.

He testified that he was aware through Schneider that competitors for the contract had agreed among themselves to inflate their bids by 15 cents a cubic yard.

BENNETT LOBBIES FOR WEST POWER

OTTAWA (CP) — A lobby for increased Western power in a new constitution began Friday on the eve of a three-day federal-provincial conference.

Although the conference does not begin until Monday, British Columbia Premier Bill Bennett flew into Ottawa Frida to meet journalists and government bureaucrats and advertise his own constitutional proposals.

Bennett's message, is that the West, particularly his own province, must be given a more dominant role in national decision-making.

Alberta and Saskatchewan share British Columbia's view.

A Loto Woes for Big December Draw

OTTAWA (CP) — Loto Canada is having trouble coming up with the winning number.

The latest problem is with some of the 60,000 booklets of group tickets sold for the Dec. 2 million dollar draw. Three or four of the 10 tickets in those booklets have the same last digits, the result of a computer error, a lottery spokesman.

That miscue won't be repeated in the Feb. 2 draw, he said. But the people who bought the booklets with the duplicate digits won't have the same chance as other ticket buyers to win $50 prizes awarded on the basis of the final numbers on the tickets.

The woes started with the peace treaty Sport Minister Iona Campagnolo reached with the provinces last month so they would stop objecting to Loto Canada's existence.

The agreement put Loto Canada out of the $1-a-ticket Loto Super it was planning and as a result the Crown corporation has to reach an accomodation on a $23 million contract with a U.S. computor firm and dispose of 56 employees.

The lottery spokesman said it isn't known how widespread the duplicate digit problem is but it has cropped up across the country among the 60,000 booklets which have been distributed.

Booklet-buyer Ray Warner of Halifax said: "When I checked the numbers, I found that four of them had the same last three digits and two other groups had the same three or four digits.

"It definitely reduces the chances of my group to win because if we don't win the $1 million prize, we have little or no chance to win the smaller prizes."

The problem was caused by the computer failing to select random tickets for the booklets.

'Love Apostle' Bailed

MONTREAL (CP) — Gaston Tremblay, leader of a dissident Roman Catholic sect called the Apostles of Infinite Love, was freed from jail Friday on $50,000 bail pending appeal of his conviction for forcibly detaining two children of a former disciple.

Tremblay, 49, also known as Father Jean Gregoire de la Trinite and recognized by his followers as the true peope, had been granted bail in Quebec Court of Appeal on Monday. But "bureaucratic mix-ups" delayed his release from the Parthenais detention centre here by four days, his lawyer's office said.

A spokesman said Tremblay went immediately to the Apostoles' monastery in St. Jovite, 100 kilometres northwest of Montreal. He will remain there while preparations are being made for his appeal of a two-year prison sentence handed down in a nearby St. Jerome court Oct. 3.

The spokesman added the appeal could take from six months to a year to prepare, and no court date has yet been fixed.

Tremblay's conviction came after a Hull, Que., man tried unsuccessfully to wrest his children from his former wife.

JOBS, WAGES RISE

OTTAWA (CP) — Employment in all industries, measured by the Statistics Canada industrial composite index, increased by 0.1 per cent in August from its July level, the federal agency reported Friday.

Statistics Canada also reported that wages in all industries increased by 0.4 per cent, durig August.

Average earnings rose in all industries except forestry, mining and construction, however average hourly wages in both mining and construction were up for the month.

Employment in all industries increased in all parts of the country except the Atlantic provinces, where the index remained the same as the previous month and Ontario where it dropped.

Law Ready to Pluck P.E.I. Magic Mushroom Pickers

CHARLETTOWN, P.E.I. (CP) — The Mounties may be picking up magic mushroom pickers in British Columbia by the score, but on the side of the continent collectors of the psychoactive fungus are scouring the cow pastures unhindered.

Nobody on Prince Edward Island has so far been charged with illegal possession of the psilocybian mushrooms, although the number of pickers in what has become an annual rite of autumn appears to be in the hundreds.

Of a dozen pickers questioned by a reporter, none professed to know of any restrictions on the wild plant.

The mounties are hoping to change that, however. A source in the RCMP's drug squad said a publicity campaign was being prepared for local television to inform people the magic mushrooms are banned.

"We want to get to the public to counter the assumption that it is okay to pick these things," said the source, who asked not to be identified.

Some mushrooms have been seized and sent for laboratory analysis, he said, but nobody on the island has so far been charged with possession of the mushrooms, an offence under the Food and Drug Act since 1974. Maximum penalty for a first offence is a $1,000 fine or six months in jail or both; an indictable offence can lead to a $5,000 fine or three years or both.

Asked if he thought enforcement of the law would truly restrict the magic mushroom picking, the Mountie source said: "We're damned if we do, and we're damned if we don't."

His doubts were echoed by mushroom pickers and by a noted Toronto psychiatrist.

Jack, a mild-mannered American who settled in a log cabin on the east coast of the island six years ago, asked: "Why on earth do they have to impose their authority on every little facet of our lives? Here you have an incredible number of people without work, eking out an existence on welfare. Those mushrooms can fetch $200 an ounce in Toronto.

"Instead of banning the wee beasties, they should be thinking of setting up a Mushroom Marketing Board, issuing permits to people to collect them and controlling the stuff the same as they do fish and game."

Dr. John Beresford is a psychiatrist who in the early 60s helped set up an LSD research foundation in New York City, the Agora Scientific Trust. He now practises in Toronto.

In a telephone interivew, he said there were serious issues of civil liberties at stake in the matter.

"Among people who are not familiar with these substances," he said, "there has always been and continue to be a great deal of distortion in the comments — on the part of people whose bias is towards orthodox views of human mental functioning."

While psychoactive mushrooms of various kinds are to be found all over North America, the particular strain collected on P.E.I. and in B.C. appears to be the favorite among mushroom devotees, and autumn the time when they are most profuse. The species is identified in one guide, Psychedelics Encyclopedia by Peter Stafford, as being Paneaolus subbalteatus, but it seems there are differing classifications of the fungi by botanists.

The ingredients in the mushrooms which bring about the mental changes, psilocybin and psilocin, are said to be the most potent psychedelics after LSD, and while their effects are practically indistinguishable from that synthetic, users report that mushroom "trips" are shorter and much gentler.

Mycologists (mushroom experts) point out the dangers of indiscriminate eating of the fungi.

Prof. Ralph Estey, of Montreal's McGill University, said in a telephone interview: "The trouble is, this is very much a case of one man's bread being another's poison.

"Two people can go out in the woods, and while one may be affected by a mushroom, the other won't. Furthermore, poisons in some mushrooms sometimes only take effect after three or four days, causing damage to the liver and kidneys."

He gave as an example the Amanita muscaria, or "fly agaric" species, which aside from its psychoactive effects is harmless. But it closely resembles Amanita pantherina, a mushroom that can prove fatal.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two men charged with possession of sawed-off shotguns Sept. 22 waived their preliminary hearing in Victoria provincial court Friday.

Dean Wesley Bowman, 18, and Paul Douglas MacRae, 25, both of no fixed address, were charged with possession of prohibited and dangerous weapons following an incident in Saanich which involved members of the Greater Victoria police emergency response team being called out.

Patrick Sweeney, counsel for both men, elected trial by judge without jury on all charges on Sept. 25.

A 17-year-old pleaded guilty to four counts of breaking and entering and three counts of auto theft, including the theft of a vehicle belonging to the executive-assistant to Tourism Minister Grace McCarthy.

Blaine Patrick McGoldrick, 1414 Hillside, entered the pleas in connection with break-ins Sept. 24 at 2844 Doncaster, Sept. 29 and Oct. 5 at Ferny's Auto Body Shop, 728 Pembroke, and between Sept. 10 and 20 at 8449 West Saanich.

Defence-lawyer Barry Mah Ming also entered guilty pleas on behalf of McGoldrick to auto thefts Sept. 27 and 30, and Oct. 4.

A co-accused youth, 19-year-old Albert Alexander Gratton, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to all seven counts Oct. 10 and was remanded by Judge William Ostler until next Tuesday for a pre-sentence report and sentencing.

Ostler remanded McGoldrick until Nov. 21 for the same purpose. Both were released on their undertakings Oct. 10 but had to obey a 9 p.m. nightly curfew until final disposition of the charges.

"You're fortunate," Judge Blake Allan told a 19-year-old woman, "Because not one in 10, at least before me, get off with a fine."

Kerri Patricia Metcalf, 1052 Jenkins, changed her plea to guilty on a charge of theft over $200 during a preliminary hearing in which she and two others were engaged.

The charge was in connection with theft of $425 on Feb. 21 from the Reddi-Chef in Colwood.

Allan fined the woman $400, placed her on 12 months probation and ordered her to make restitution.

Ostler gave a 25-year-old man convicted of impaired driving just over a month ago 20 days in jail for the same charge.

Paul Gordon Fulton of Port Renfrew pleaded guilty to impaired driving and driving while under suspension.

Crown counsel Richard Anthony told the court Fulton was spotted about 10:25 p.m., Oct. 14, speeding east on Bay. He was stopped and a subsequent breath test by Victoria city police produced readings of .17 and .16, Anthony stated.

Anthony also said Fulton was convicted of impaired driving Sept. 12, 1978, at Parksville, when he was fined $400.

Ostler handed Fulton a concurrent, 20-day term for the driving under suspension.

Fined for drinking-driving were: Rex Lloyd Hammond, 29, of 254 Gorge Road East, $700; Darren Wallace Doll, 18, of 915 Fullerton, $700; Ronald James Horsland, 4175 Interurban, $500; and Charles Ronald Howe, 35, of Langley, $300.

In addition, Hammond was fined $300 for refusing a breath test demand, Doll was ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work, and Howe was fined $100 for refusing a breath test demand.

'The Monster Man' In Bastion Comedy

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A monster can be a man's best friend, at least an actor's, according to the experience of Halifax-born David Brown. Is it really true, I asked him, that you are the only actor in the world to have portrayed on stage the three greatest monsters in stage literature — the Frankenstein creature, Dracula, and the Jekyll-Hyde personality?

"Absolutely true," says Brown, a pleasant, bearded, blue-eyed articulate man whose love affair with the theatre caused him to desert a developing law practice for a professional stage career.

"You see, I created the Frankenstein role in the play written by Canadian authors Walter Learning and Alden Nowlan from Mary Shelley's book. Others have played it since but none has also done the other two. I played Frankenstein's pathetic monster for six months in four separate productions."

Any regrets about the early switch of professions? Not really, he answers.

"You don't get rich," he adds, "so if money is the most important thing to you, do something else. But we Canadian actors — many of us — are lucky; we move constantly about the country from Victoria to Halifax, doing something that is meaningful to us and on the whole keeping busy enough to earn a reasonable living."

Brown hopes the Canadian theatre scene won't become polarized in Toronto and Vancouver as some people seem to feel might occur. What is so healthy, according to him, is the constant flow and interchange back and forth between the regional professional theatres. This is his first visit to Victoria — "What a beautiful city!"

He is playing the role of Jeff Golding (not a monster) in Bastion Theatre's up-coming comedy, Otherwise Engaged.

Dalhousie University was the setting for Brown's deepening involvement with theatre through his activities with Dalhousie's Glee and Dramatic Society. It was also the setting in which he met the distinguished English author of Otherwise Engaged, Simon Gray.

Gray, a cool, easy-going sort majoring in English, did not participate in productions but mingled with the clique that controlled the drama club, says Brown. He was interested in writing plays and one of his scripts was produced on BBC television with Alec Guinness in the lead. That proved to be Gray's open sesame to the world of the successful playwright.

Guinness was so impressed with the writing in the TV script that he called Gray, who was back in England by this time, and asked if he had a stage play. Gray admitted that he had a play, Wise Child, and Guinness said he would like to read it. His next call to Gray was to ask if he might produce it. Yes, said Gray, hardly able to believe his ears.

"And would it be all right with you if I played the lead?" asked Guinness.

About all Gray could manage was a gulped-out, "yes, of course."

Other notable West End and Broadway successes have followed on the heels of that first one, including the hit comedy, Butley, which was included in a Bastion season a few years back. Otherwise Engaged has picked up double New York Drama Awards for Best Play and the Best Play Award voted by 20 London Theatre critics in 1975.

Brown says Gray is very like the chief protagonist in this comedy, Simon Hench, a successful literate and sophisticated man who tries to disengage himself, by being "otherwise engaged", from the friends and relatives who intrude upon him, clamoring for his attention.

Comedy was Brown's first love but, he says, "it was monsters that bridged the tricky time for me after I left law to plunge into theatre."

After Dalhousie Brown spent some time in England and at the University of Grenoble in France learning French. Is he bilingual?

"I was," he says, "but when I came back to Canada — to Nova Scotia — I came in contact with so few people who spoke French that I soon became very rusty."

His professional career started at his home town's Neptune Theatre where he played, among other things, the weirdies — Mortimer in Arsenic and Old Lace, and the confused Jonathon in Oh Dad, Poor Dad. Engagements in theatre after theatre across the country followed for the next five years, with Brown playing ever more horrific characters. But all that's a while ago now and he's glad to have returned to comedy. Recently he toured the Maritimes in Bernard Slade's Same Time Next Year.

Directing, including industrial shows in Miami, the Bahamas, South America, Vancouver and Toronto; radio performances and film round out this successful Canadian actor's dossier. In the last named category he has completed a film, Deadly Harvest, with Clint Walker and Nehemiah Persof, which was made by Universal Studios in and around Toronto.

It's the same film, incidentally, in which a lead role has been played by Vancouver Island actress Kim Cattrall, who is currently busy shaping a career in Hollywood.

David Brown, as intruding friend Golding, encroaches on Simon (Edwin Stephenson) Hench's privacy as well as his sherry in Otherwise Engaged, the comedy which Bastion Theatre presents Friday through Nov. 18.

A Tasty Morsel Of Black Humor

A Movie Review
By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

An unlikely blend of food, murder and Roberty Morley make a perfect recipe in the comedy-thriller, Who is Killing the Great Chef's of Europe.

Funny and macabre at the same time, Chefs mixes an orgy of gourmet delights with a series of violent deaths. The result is blackly humorous look at some of the most fabulous kitchens in the world and the highly cultivated art of of eating.

One by one the greatest chefs in Europe are getting knocked off in their kitchens. At the centre of it all, a tribute to their culinary genius, is Morley, an influential restaurant critic who publishes his own magazine.

Morley is magnificent as a monument to self-indulgence; a mountain of human flesh who is willing slave to his taste buds. Red-faced and puffing from the slightest exertion, he dominates the movie, spitting acerbic witticisms and striking fear into the hearts of chef and scullery maid alike.

Morley plays Maximillian Vanderveere, whose excesses at the dinner table have given him an extra 150 pounds, gout, ulcers and severe hardening of the arteries. Vanderveere would rather die than give up gourmet food.

It's not Vanderveere, but his favorite chefs who are in danger, as they are methodically murdered. The killer employs the same techniques each chef used preparing his own special dish. The first victim winds up in his oven, baking at 450 degrees; the second keeps his lobsters company in the bottom of a fish tank; and the third gets his head squeezed between a duck press. Meanwhile, the audience gets an interesting behind-the-scenes look at some of the most famous kitchens in London, Venice and Paris.

Scrumptious Jacqueline Bisset plays, appropriately enough, the best dessert chef in the world, who is also a candidate for killing. Jackie is famous for her bombes, which she sets on fire before serving, and doesn't look forward to the prospect of meeting the murderer.

Her attempt to find out who is killing the chefs is aided by ex-husband George Segal, an American millionaire who made his fortune in fast-food outlets. Segal is trying to start a chain of omelette huts in Europe and takes time out to woo Jackie again and help her discover the identity of the chef-killer.

The dialogue, particularly Morley's lines, is excellent — full of biting observations about human nature and peppered with delightful insults. Credit is also due Canadian director Ted Kotcheff for skilfully whipping all the ingredients into a fast-paced, thoroughly enjoyable movie.

Young Maestro Conducts

Victoria Symphony's next guest conductor in the "Year of the Maestros" comes from Mexico. Jose Flores is younger than the orchestra — not yet 32 — and early in his career was a pianist.

Listeners may expect a special empathy with the guest soloist for this weekend's pair of concerts — Misha Dichter, an American pianist of Polish parentage whose career was launched when he was awarded the silver medal at Moscow in the renowned Tchaikowsky competition.

FLORES
. . . from Mexico

The young artist, who had been a student of Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School in New York, was subsequently a soloist with the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival. He now appears in concerts and recitals throughout the world, including duo recitals with his Brazilian pianist wife, Cipa.

Maestro Flores' advanced study, after graduation from the University of Guadalajara school of music, was pursued on a two-year German government schofarship at Saarbrucken Musik Hochschule. Here he continued the study of piano and added orchestral and choral conducting to his courses. He became a frequent piano soloist on Saarbrucken Radio with the radio orchestra and in recital.

Flores was made associate conductor of the Guadalajara Symphony at the age of 26. Later he founded and conducted the Guadalajara Chamber Orchestra. His interest and ability in conducting opera developed at this time and in the past season he has conducted La Boheme and Tosca in four country-wide tours. He was also lavishly praised for his presentation of the Verdi Requiem with the National Symphony Orchestra in Mexico City.

At present Flores is associate conductor with the Jalapa Symphony Orchestra, of which Luis Herrera de la Fuente is maestro. Fuente was a guest conductor with the Victoria Symphony last season. In the past season Flores has conducted more than 100 concerts with the Guadalajara and Jalapa orchestras.

The year ahead appears to be a stimulating and productive one for the young maestro. In November he will conduct four concerts with the New Philharmonic Orchestra of Mexico City and the opera Tosca with the National Opera Company. He will take the podium of the National Symphony for several concerts in December and during the balance of the year will tour Mexico and South America with the Jalapa Orchestra. He will also be giving four concerts in Vienna with violinist Joseph Sivo and in other cities in Austria.

Looming in the future are guest appearances in various places, recordings with the National Symphony and a tour of Poland.

The richly colorful Scheherazade Suite by Rimsky-Korsakov is a major work Flores has chosen to perform with the Victoria Symphony. With Dichter at the piano, the brilliant Rachmaninoff Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini will be a highlight of the concerts, which will return to the Royal Theatre for the first time this season. The Prelude to Die Meistersinger and Picasso Suite by Canadian composer Harry Somers complete Flores' program.

Music Notebook

Two great composers will be honored at a concert at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the University Centre Auditorium. George Corwin will conduct the University of Victoria Orchestra in a free public concert of works by Franz Schubert and Antonio Vivaldi.

Marking the 150th anniversary of the death of Schubert, his B minor Symphony No. 8, the Unfinished, will be performed. Also programmed are the Spring and Summer movements from Vivaldi's The Four Seasons. These will celebrate the 300th anniversary of the composer's birth. Graduate student Randall Weiss will be violin soloist in the Vivaldi excerpts.

Winner of the UVic music department's concerto competition is cellist Marlene Tureski, who will be heard in a concerto with the orchestra. A second-year student, she is one of three winners in the competition. The other two will be heard in later concerts. Juliette Proudman, an advanced conducting student under Corwin, will conduct the orchestra in the performance of a Mozart number.

Following the concert the audience will be invited to meet members of the orchestra and soloists back-stage.

There is a new musical organization in Victoria and in spite of the roster of such organizations that already exists, it will be a welcome addition for many music lovers. Titled The Bach Society of Greater Victoria, it is a fully professional chamber music consortium.

Its founder is oboist William Benjamin of the University of Victoria, and he will be among the artists featured at the inaugural concert to take place Nov. 25 at St. John's Anglican Church, Quadra. Others featured on the program will be conductor George Corwin, organist Edward Norman and violinist Susan Eddlemon, assistant concert master of the Victoria Symphony.

From Bach's diverse literature, the Society has chosen the Brandenburg Concerto No.4 and Cantatas No.12 and 17 for the first concert. The Bach Society has evolved from a shared commitment to the instrumental and vocal chamber music of Bach and his contemporaries, embracing and exploring this rich and varied repertoire.

Projected plans for the near future include chamber recitals, in-school concerts and a spring Bach Festival.

Audiences at Sunday and Tuesday night performances during the run of The Belfry's Piaf: A Musical Biography, will be invited to join cast, crew and staff for an informal discussion over a cup of coffee.

They believe "talk nights" will prove a stimulating and informative opportunity for all concerned to ask questions and talk about theatre, from both sides of the footlights, about the particular production, or even the show's subject - the late great French singer, Edith Piaf.

Spectacular growth of Danny Grossman as dancer-choreographer is favorite subject with dance commentators. From New York's Paul Taylor Company, Grossman went to Toronto Dance Theatre in 1973, then started his own ensemble, which comes to McPherson Playhouse Sunday at 8.

Trio Victoria Concert

The Trio Victoria series of concerts at Craigdarroch Castle continues Friday with some variation from the program norm. Only one trio — the Beethoven Piano Trio in G Major, Op.1 No.2, has been programmed. Otherwise two sonatas fill out the evening, Winifred Scott being the partner of Trio member James Hunter in the Poulenc Sonata for Cello and Piano, while the other two Trio members, Sydney Humphreys and Robin Wood, will perform the Brahms A Major Sonata for Violin and Piano.

Concert time is 8 p.m. and tickets are available at the door.

U.K. Pianist Gives Master Classes

Internationally noted British pianist Kendall Taylor, eminent as a soloist, accompanist, lecturer and adjudicator, will conduct two master classes Monday under the joint auspices of the Victoria Conservatory of Music and the University of Victoria department of music.

The first class will take place from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., and the second from 2 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Both will be held in the new UVic music wing.

Tuesday at 8 p.m., Taylor will be presented in recital playing a program of works by Haydn, Mozart, Weber, Beethoven, Franck and Chopin. This event takes place in the recital hall of the music wing, which is adjacent to the MacLaurin Building.

Taylor has been a professor of piano at the Royal College of Music in London for many years and is now completing a concert tour of the Orient. Enquiries regarding the master classes should be directed to the Conservatory of Music at 595-2151.

BANNER DAY FOR KARPOV

MOSCOW (Reuter) — World Chess Champion Anatoly Karpov, who recently returned to the Soviet Union after defeating challenger Viktor Korchnoi, was awarded the Order of the Red Banner of Labor on Friday, the official Tass news agency reported.

The order was conferred on Karpov "for his achievements in sport and his great contribution to the development of the Soviet school of chess," Tass said.

Irish Rovers at UVic Centre

Brothers Will and George Millar, cousin Joe and boyhood friends Jimmy Ferguson and Wilcil McDowell, in the course of roving around the world, crossed the seas to North America a few years ago, discovered Canada and decided to put down roots and make this country their own — the home base of the Irish Rovers.

Since then they have become one of the country's top performing arts groups and on Friday and Saturday they will be appearing at the University Centre auditorium.

No matter how often one has experienced the Irish Rovers, they are irresistable.

Their gay humor, infectious rhythms and melodies, coupled with their up-bubbling Celtic charm and lilting, musical voices makes every appearance a refreshing experience for everyone.

Their material is drawn from traditional and modern folk tunes of their homeland and songs originating in Australia, Scotland and the United States. Tickets are on sale at the University Centre box-office, the McPherson Playhouse box-office, and Hillside Mall ticket centre.

Czar's Nephew Dies in Rome

ROME (Reuter) — Prince Roman Romanov Petrovich, nephew of the last czar of Russia, has died at 82, his family said.

The son of Grand Duke Peter of Russia and Princess Militza of Montenegro, Prince Roman fled to France shortly after the 1917 Russian revolution. He later moved to Italy to join a small group of Russian exiles in Rome.

AROUND THE GALLERIES: Jorgensen Watercolors at Backroom

HUSBAND
. . . at Maples

Flemming Jorgensen, a Victoria artist who has steadily built an international reputation and is widely regarded as an important Canadian painter, is to be represented at The Backroom Gallery, 2020 Fort, in an exhibition of watercolors under the title, Victoria Places.

The exhibition will be previewed Tuesday, 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., and will remain on view thereafter until Nov. 11.

The 19 watercolors comprise impressions of Fort Rodd Hill, Ross Bay Cemetary, parkscapes and other Victoria area aspects. Visitors can see the watercolors Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Currently to be seen in the McPherson Library Gallery at UVic is Women As Seen By Women, the theme for a women's art show which will end Tuesday.

Sponsored by the UVic Women's Action Group and Victoria Status of Women Action Group, the exhibit consists of prints, paintings, drawings, photography and sculpture by local women. It was arranged in conjunction with the sixth annual Victoria Women's Conference, which ends today at the university. Viewing hours until Tuesday closing are from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. today and Sunday, and 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

Prairie scenes are the subject of an exhibition by self-taught artist David H. Heinrichs which opens at the Emily Carr Arts Centre, 207 Government, Monday. Dr. Heinrichs, who now resides in Victoria, grew up and was educated in Saskatchewan, receiving his B.S.A. and M.Sc. degrees at the University of Saskatchewan and subsequent doctorate from the University of Minnesota.

As an artist he is a realist and paints agricultural prairie scenes stemming from his intimate knowledge of the depression years through to the present. His most recent paintings emphasize prairie villages and their grain elevators as seen today and the landmarks and derelicts of old farms.

There will be a reception Monday from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The exhibition will continue through Nov. 10, with open hours, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The preview of an exhibition of watercolors, sketches and photographs by Vicky Husband, the product of a visit this spring to Greece by the Victoria artist, will take place Sunday, Nov. 5, 1 p.m., at The Maples Gallery, at the corner of West Saanich and Keating Cross Roads.

Last featured at The Maples in a succesful showing of watercolor drawings from the Aegean Islands and Macedonia, Ms. Husband now presents her vision of the Greek land and people through a broader range of media and images. The exhibition will continue on view through Nov. 26.

THE CORPORATION OF THE DISTRICT OF OAK BAY

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING LAND USE CONTRACTS

NOTICE is hereby given that all persons who deem their interest in property affected by the following proposed By-laws will be afforded an opportunity to be heard before the Municipal Council on the matters contained therein at a Public Hearing to be held in the Council Chamber, Municipal Hall, Oak Bay, B.C., on Monday, November 6, 1978 at 7:30 p.m.

(a) By-law No. 3268 "British American Mortgage Corporation Limited, Gerald Ferdinand Weston and National Mortgage Corporation Land Use Contract Authorization By-law, 1978"

A Land Use Contract with British American Mortgage Corporation Limited, Gerald Ferdinand Weston and National Mortgage Corporation containing terms and conditions for the use of land and all buildings erected thereon, for the purpose of the erection of a retail/office building at 2044 Oak Bay Avenue, including the single family residence lots at 2047 and 2053 Chaucer Street, legally described as: Lot 26, Section 69, Block 1, Plan 298; Lot 27, Section 69, Block 1, Plan 298; Lot 10, Section 69, Block 1, Plan 298; Lot 10, Section 69, Block 1, Plan 298. The retail office building would be two storeys, set on an angle on the lot so that it would face southeast, with parking on the Chaucer Street lots and ingress and egress from Oak Bay Avenue only, along the eastern boundary of the property.

(b) By-law No. 3269 "Bank of Montreal Land Use Contract Authorization By-law, 1978"

A Land Use Contract with the Bank of Montreal containing terms and conditions for the use of land and all buildings erected thereon, for the purpose of altering the building on 2219 Oak Bay Avenue, legally described as Westerly 45 ft. of R as shown outlined in red on 173R, Sections 23 and 69, Victoria District, Plan 673, to allow for the extension of the present building into the rear yard to the property line as a single storey structure, and for the addition of a canopy on the front of the building to give a pedestrian walkway.

British blues legend Long John Baldry (left) will be appearing in a Save-the-Whales concert Sunday 7.30 p.m. at the new UVic University Centre Auditorium. On the same bill will be local jazz ensemble The Fisher-Moore Big Band. Proceeds from the show will be used by Greenpeace to finance an anti-whaling expedition.

Now Tammy Receives Death Threat

NASHVILLE (UPI) — Country music star Tammy Wynette has been threatened again, this time by a note left on the front door of her home that warned: "We'll get you the next time."

Homicide Lt. Sherman Nickens said Friday authorities were convinced there was a connection between the note and the incident three weeks ago when Miss Wynette was abducted from a Nashville shopping centre, beaten, choked and finally released near the Alabama border, about 80 miles south of Nashville.

Nickens said the handwritten note warned: "We missed you the first time. We'll get you the next time."

He said it was found Wednesday wedged between the massive front doors at her heavily guarded Nashville mansion by an off-duty police officer working as a security guard.

"They've got to be related," Nickens said of the incidents. "I don't think this is a joke. If it is, it's a bad joke."

The note, on paper from a yellow legal pad, was sent to the Tennessee Bureau of Criminal Investigation lab for handwriting and fingerprints tests.

Three weeks ago, the 36-year-old singer told police she was at a local shopping centre when she was abducted by a masked man who forced her to drive to a point just north of the Alabama-Tennessee border where she was slugged in the face and dumped from her car.

She has told police previously that she has been harassed by threatening telephone calls, prowlers and vandals.

Since the kidnapping, Miss Wynette has been accompanied by armed guards whenever she leaves her home and her house is protected by guard dogs and a security force.

Nickens said Miss Wynette had become frightened moments before the note was discovered when a guard dog began barking loudly. She had asked the policeman to inspect the front area of the home.

"Miss Wynette's husband, George Richey, had just left the house and gone to the market," Nickens said. "The front gates were open and apparently that's how the person who wrote the note gained entrance."

That Family Is Home Again They Say. . .

LONDON — The Ashbrooke-Pembleton-Frenchs have returned to Britain.

Mrs. Ashbrooke-Pembleton-French is glad to be back, wayward son Julian is in some sort of difficulty again, and daughter Amanda is still having problems with her love life. Mr. A-P-F remains quiet.

It all sounds like some television soap opera, but in fact it's another outbreak of that wacky humor that spreads like an epidemic through the upper-crust British from time to time.

The current epidemic started last April in the personal columns of The Times. Sandwiched between cryptic lovers' messages, lawyers seeking lost heirs, and people wanting to sell their houses was this deadpan anouncement:

"The Ashbrooke-Pembleton-Frenchs would like to apologize to everyone for their absence from the Badminton horse trials this month."

Then, two weeks later, came the plea: "Mrs. Ashbrooke-Pembleton-French would like to ask the young man who attended their party on Friday immediately to return the Land Rover and kindly remove the Lamborghini from the croquet lawn."

Quick as a flash, the elite British caught on. Back came another message: "Ashbrooke-Pembleton-French—kindly remove your Land Rover from our duckpond and return our Lamborghini," and the hunt was in full cry.

From then on until mid-July, the Asbrooke-Pembleton-Frenchs pelted eager Times readers with news about the family.

No facet of their social life was left unchronicled.

Then came silence. Until to the joy of everyone, last week under the heading "How nice to be back in England," Mrs. A-P-F announced cryptically: "It seems such a long time since we used these columns for our messages, but of course our friends know the reason. Sadness can touch everyone's life."

Maybe the sadness stemmed from the A-P-F children, for Mrs. A-P-F next announced, "I am overwhelmed by all our friends' sincerity towards poor Julian's plight," and a few days later followed with, "Does anyone have a brilliant scheme that Julian could immerse himself in? A veil had best be drawn across the Cfrencester episode."

Meanwhile, Amanda has been keeping a low profile since returning from abroad — apart from the plea: "Esmond darling, you still have my address book from Austria. Will you be near Bembury this weekend?"

'THE BEST AUDIENCE WOULD BE DEAF'

PRINCE ALBERT — John Diefenbaker praised Rolling Stones guitarist Keith Richards Friday for his decision to comply with a court ruling and perform a benefit concert for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, but he had few kind words for the man's music.

"Having heard some of his music, I would suggest the best audience he could have would be the deaf," said the former prime minister.

Meanwhile, Judge Lloyd Graburn and a lawyer representing the Canadian National Institute for the Blind will meet in Toronto Monday to arrange details of the concert, a CNIB spokesman says.

Peter Desrochers, national co-ordinator for CNIB information services, said Friday no decision has been made on where the concert will be held, despite earlier reports that it would be staged at Maple Leaf Gardens.

ANNOUNCING A BREAKTHROUGH IN TEMPTING TURKEY TASTE BY VILLAGE MEATS & Woodward's

2 OLD B.C. COMPANIES WITH A GREAT NEW IDEA!

Here's how it happened!

Bell's Best Foods Ltd., who have supplied turkeys to Woodward's since the 1930's, and Village Quality Meats, who marketed turkeys and turkey pieces, have been supplying many of these quality products to the restaurant trade since their amalgamation.

Earlier, this year Woodward's approached them with the idea of getting these great tasting foods for their customers. The first products under the Village Label arrived in July and the public's response was overwhelming acceptance. Now from their new, modern, Federally inspected plant; Village Brand meats are available in quantity for you to enjoy all through the year.

Here's what it is!

Fresh B.C. Turkey meat processed into the most convenient and varied forms of fine eating you could imagine. There is fully cooked turkey roast, that is as fine and moist a piece of white breast meat as you could want. Then there is a piece of solid turkey meat that tastes just like a fine, mild cured ham but with all the qualities (like low fat content) that turkey is famous for. Try them all. We know you are in for a very pleasant taste surprise.

Turkey Anytime?

You bet! Tender, white meat, fully-cooked, ready-to-serve.

No bones about it. Even if there's only one or two of you, you can enjoy turkey anytime. Sliced cold, diced in salads or casseroles or heated through and served with gravy. Delicious!

Boneless Breast of Turkey Roast lb. 3.89

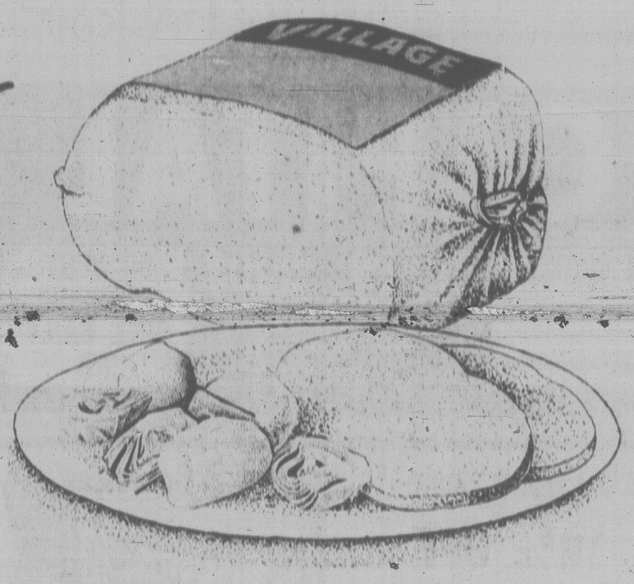

A Turkey Ham?

So lean it's unreal but that smoky flavour says "HAM"

Sliced in a sandwich, as a hot main course or lightly fried with breakfast eggs, this fully cooked meat is super. You'll buy the goodness of turkey but your taste will say ham.

Turkey Ham Style. Fully cooked lb. 2.39

Turkey Ham Style Slices 8 oz. 1.39

Turkey Sausages...You're Kidding?

No we're not and the only difference you'll notice is there isn't any grease.

This is probably the biggest and maybe the nicest surprise of all. Freshly ground turkey, delicately spiced, brings you a really great tasting breakfast sausage that fries to a golden brown with hardly any shrinkage. If you don't have a 'no stick' pan you may have to add a little butter, margarine or oil because they produce virtually no grease.

Turkey Breakfast Sausages lb. 1.39

Smoked Breast Meat

Solid boneless breast meat with a delicate smoky flavour adds a new dimension to entertaining. Thinly sliced on open-faced sandwiches or on a meat tray. lb. 3.89

Smoked Drumsticks

Dark meat addicts get a break here with their favourite turkey piece done in "smoky" style. lb. 1.35

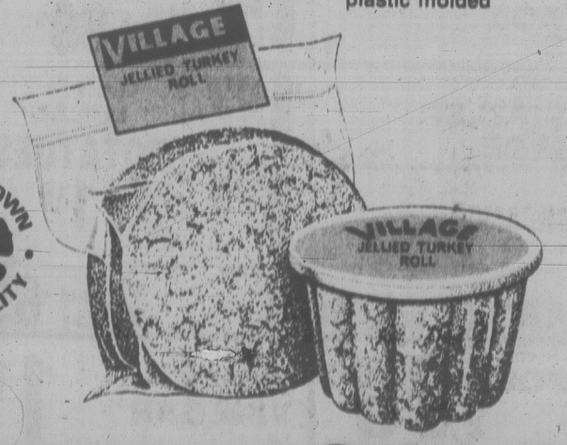

Jellied Turkey Roll

This will have head cheese lovers switching their brand.

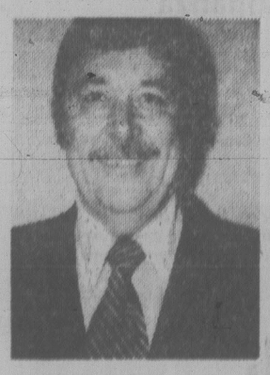

Two styles. One's great sliced in sandwiches or on a meat tray. The other unmolded as a centerpiece for a plate of assorted crackers will be an entertainment hit.

Fully Cooked Turkey Roll By the piece lb. 1.79

Six to Seven Million Pounds of Processed B.C. Turkey Predicted for 1979.

"Tom" R. C. Bell, President of Bell's Best Foods Ltd. and Village Quality Meats Ltd. predicts that in 1979 his companies will process six to seven million pounds of turkey for sale all across Canada. Mr. Bell, whose mother, Nancy started raising turkeys in 1932, joined the family business in 1947. "Retail selling of processed turkey products will mean a real shot in the arm for the B.C. turkey industry," says Mr. Bell. "It will mean more jobs in production, manufacturing and marketing and a subsequent boost to the B.C. economy," Mr. Bell concluded. Mr. George McGill, General Manager of Village Meats Ltd., whose responsibility is marketing the new products, says that consumer reaction to the Village products so far has been tremendous. "The goodness of the product and the low fat content are real plusses in the eyes of the consumer," McGill says. John Williams, who oversees all production as General Manager of Bell's Best Foods Ltd. is justifiably proud of his plant and his staff. "We have a first rate plant and good people to produce a superior product," says Mr. Williams. "In over 25 years in this business, I've never been more enthusiastic about a line of products. You can look for even more in the next few years."

St.Laurent spring style . . .

Yves Is Sailing Into Spring

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — Designer Yves Saint Laurent launched a sailor look — gold braid, anchors and all — at his spring ready-to-wear fashion show.

The second message from Saint Laurent was that he kept hemlines covering the knee. Thus the wily designer fooled the Paris rag trade which reportedly had expected him to shorten skirts and widen shoulders even more than he did in his July high fashion show that started other designers on the short, 1940s hourglass shape currently swamping the ready-to-wear collections.

International buyers jamming the influential Saint Laurent show at the Palais de Chaillot museum happily applauded the sailor outfits in flaming red, darkest navy blue and white.

The designer did almost the entire show in separates: shorts and ankle-length pants with sailor side buttons, windbreaker jackets with anchors appliqued on one sleeve, straight, skinny under-knee skirts, pull-on tops with narrow middie collars and striped sailors' tops.

For late day the sailor went dressier: navy blue trousers with a sliver of gold braid down the side to match the brass buttons on the little jackets.

Even Saint Laurent's main print smelled of the sea — crescent moons, stars and seashells combined in one print or splashed separately in various sizes on silks. Skin-tight, knitted dresses, trousers and jackets also featured this print.

For evening, Saint Laurent continued his trend of body-clinging dresses that show lots of skin. Wildly-printed sarong dresses with bra tops bared one leg and most of the top. Other gowns were shirred over the hips, guaranteeing lots of wiggle in the walk.

Slim dresses with snugly belted waists and little puffed sleeves with slightly widened shoulders were trotted out by the dozens on Givenchy's runway. International buyers and press applauded long and loudly for a long white coat lined with navy blue that went over a navy narrow skirt and curve-hugging navy lace top.

Silk flower prints with bare backs and chest-baring halter necklines showed that Givenchy's collection was as sexy as any. Cigarette-slim dresses were slit up the back to bare the leg. Lots of little black short dresses showed every curve of the body.

BRIGHT SPRING FLORALS

By JOANNE WINSHIP

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pancaldi and B, the fashion firm with the intriguing name, has enlarged its spring-summer collection this year, adding Swiss voile and cotton to its extensive group of silks.

This is one of the firm's most colorful collections, all made in Italy, to date. Bright florals and abstract prints predominate.

Accordian pleating with yards of fabric, elasticized waists and unpleated matching shirts and tops come in both long evening and short daytime lengths. Soft jackets have small shoulder pads. Sheer voile dresses can be had with or without matching shorts.

Pancaldi and B's large hand screened silks are full of details, such as inverted pleats in solid colors on a print dress or skirt, contrasting color piping on sleeves and silk embroidery on little Peter Pan collars of voile shirts and dresses.

Long silk ribbons in two and three color tones make unusual belts for dresses. Tunics made with three silk scarves are worn.

Hechter Shows Varied Mixture

By JOANNE WINSHIP

NEW YORK (UPI) — Daniel Hechter's fashion collection for spring-summer 1979 is as versatile as one can get.

Hechter, predominantly a sportswear designer, has updated this collection with some good evening looks for the first time. He has teamed raw silk with charmeuse and they work well together. One [illegible] is olive drab with cerise.

The designer mixes linen and terry cloth shirts and shorts with cotton shirts. He also shows glazed chintz and cotton voile blazers with pockets on the back and contrasting piping on the lapels over pedal pushers and pegged bottom pants.

Hechter chooses iridescent charmeuse for little jackets and skirts and raw silk for soft blazers. Side wrapped skirts in charmeuse works with any number of tops.

A simple halter neck straight silk charmeuse dress that can go anywhere is a standout. Well cut shorts in many fabrics and colors are an important part of the collection.

A casual evening look is Hechter's open work cotton lace jackets and skirts in bright colors with simple tank or camisole tops or shirts. Some of the silk wrap skirts reverse to another color and can completely change the look of an outfit.

All the pieces work with one another in this well thought-out collection. Colors range from khaki to tomato red. Good all the way.

The three-week New York showings got off to a strong start with the Gil Ambez collection for Genre, inspired by the race track. Ambez has taken jockeys' gear and interpreted it in high-waisted pants, tapered and buttoned or tied below the knee, [illegible] toned on the side above the ankle. Teamed with these are gay and amusing cotton jockey shirts in two color tones.

Among Ambez' winners are gay and amusing cotton jockey shirts in two color tones and a group of racing dots and stripes in two or three colors in sheer voile over striped voile pants and skirts.

For less sporty events Ambez shows flirty little dresses in floral prints or iridescent silks. Skirts are slit front, back or sideways. Wide belts cinch waists. Skirts are edging up. High heeled snakeskin sandals by Jean and David add panache to both dresses and pants.

Queen Dedicates

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Liverpool Cathedral, the largest church in England and the fifth largest in the world, has been dedicated by the Queen, more than 74 years after work started on it. The cornerstone was laid July 18, 1904, by King Edward VII. A few finishes touches remain to be made.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Value-wise, this sale will be terrific! . . .

We're giving you a whole week in which to lay your plans . . . to visit Roy Imports Sidney store during their Anniversary Week, Nov. 4-11 . . . To celebrate one year of business in that delightful town, Roy's are putting on a sale whose like we bet you haven't seen in many a year! . . . All the regular merchandise out of regular stock is having price tags slashed by anything from 30% to 50% . . . We drove out to Sidney especially this week to find out about the goings-on . . . and if you live in Victoria . . . or the Gulf Islands or anywhere up-Island we advise you to do likewise come next Saturday . . . As for Sidney people . . . we presume they'll want to be on hand as soon as the doors open! . . . We saw handsome new coats . . . wools, tweeds, mohairs . . . All kinds of raincoats with famous brand names . . . about 150 of these . . . including a terrific selection at just $59.95 . . . Noticed one wool coat marked at $260. . . . that some lucky woman will get for $149.95 . . . ⅓ to ½ off all wool coats . . . If you know Roy's, you know the quality of their clothes . . . and with everything going up as it is, isn't it great to get something good at these low sale prices? . . . There's sportswear . . . which you seldom find at bargain prices . . . like $54.95 Bleyle pure wool slacks reduced to $29.95 . . . $90 slacks for $54.95 . . . A good group of Bleyle pure wool jumpers . . . a group of suits including Bleyle, Jaeger, County Sports and Munrospun tweeds . . . Dresses, loungewear, scarves etc. . . . But space runs out . . . A new line of Royal Albert at Elsea's . . .

Every time we visit it we think what an amazing store Elsea's Gift Shop is . . . You'll find a wealth of things we'll swear are obtainable nowhere else in town! . . . However, what we want to tell you mostly about today is the new line of Royal Albert oven-to-table dinnerware called "Country Garden" . . . which very few stores carry . . . It's detergent, dishwasher, freezer and oven-proof . . . comes in lovely contemporary shapes, and the most delightful patterns . . . with names like Bittersweet, Meadowlark, Summer Fantasy, Rose Arbor and Summer Solitude . . . Besides the regular place settings, there are all sorts of other things like casseroles, platters, souffle dishes, coffee mugs etc. . . . all open stock . . . and guaranteed against chipping, cracking and crazing for two years . . . If, indeed such a catastrophe should happen . . . the piece will be speedily replaced! . . . We think you'll be as enthusiastic as we are over this new line of Royal Albert dinnerware! . . . Elsea's have all the old patterns of Royal Albert china too . . . so if you need to replace something . . . this is definitely the place to find it! . . . Elsea's also have many patterns . . . including the Indian Tree . . . in Paragon English bone china . . . and Mason's Ironstone Pink and Blue Vista pieces in a fantastic variety of sizes . . . so now you know! . . . When we were in last week we caught them unpacking a large shipment of interesting jewel boxes . . . And those really outstanding Medici Christmas cards from England are expected daily . . . Elsea's Gift Shop, 637 Fort St., 385-1111.

Ultrasuede gets better and better! . . .

Everyone knows that ultrasuede lasts practically forever . . . and you've probably got one or more pieces of it now . . . but you can give your present wardrobe a whole new look by adding one of the ultrasuede blouses which Gibson's have just received . . . along with a lot of other gorgeous ultrasuede clothes! . . . This new pullover blouse . . . which comes in cream, shocking pink and burgundy . . . has a soft neck, a tiny bit of blouson, and elastic at the wrists and around the bottom . . . You can wear it as a suit top with a turtleneck sweater underneath for daytime . . . or over a silk blouse . . . with a tweed or mohair skirt . . . or naturally, with an ultrasuede skirt or trousers . . . It's a real honey! . . . Gibson's have casual ultrasuede hats too . . . in two styles . . . black, two shades of brown, French blue, cream and cream-camel . . . Very smart and "Vogue-ish"! . . . More new ultrasuedes include two new styles of dresses . . . A shirtwaist with a zipped front and drawstring waist in Ashes shade . . . and a shirt-dress with mandarin collar, tiny cuff and wide fringed tie belt . . . this latter dress in French blue and stone . . . A 3-pce. suit in black or chocolate has the new straight blazer, skirt with European pleat in front, and matching vest . . . As for the new lined ultrasuede coats, they're absolutely beautiful! . . . Several different styles in all the most wanted colors . . . Don't boggle at the price . . . they're a real investment! . . . The same coat will take you to the opera as well as to the supermarket! . . . Gibson's, 708 View St., 384-5913.

Vive le Canada! . . .

There are some mighty fine shoes made right here in Canada . . . as witness the Thomas Wallace footwear at Munday's this week . . . As we've told you previously, sandals are very big this fall and winter . . . and Thomas Wallace has come out with some dressy sandals in a man-made material called "futura" . . . which looks like patent, suede, calf or kid as the case might be . . . and we swear you'd never know the difference! . . . One style with high dressy heel and stripping vamp has an instep strap and gold trim around the sole and at the toe . . . Taupe or brown futura kid, black futura suede or patent . . . Another sandal with broader bands over the vamp comes in brown and black futura kid . . . Both of these are priced at only $40 . . . Genuine leather sandals . . . which cost $55 . . . include a city sandal with a little broader heel . . . accented stitching on the side of the solid vamp . . . in either redwood or dark brown . . . a nice suit shoe . . . There's an open-toed sling in true tan or dark brown leather . . . A dressy sandal with narrow wishbone strap . . . gold trim around the sole line, and a gold and silver buckle in front . . . A black suede mule with gold toe piece looks terrifically comfortable . . . $45 . . . and there are two smart pumps . . . one kid with a suede plug on the vamp and good-looking gold trim, in either black or brown, at $60 . . . and a suede pump with gold piping at kid toe tip and heel . . . Black or brown . . . $60 at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Kimberly knits are forever! . . .

Those among you who think no well-planned wardrobe is complete without a Kimberly knit . . . will be happy to know that Charmante's have just received a shipment of Kimberly knit suits . . . Understatedly simple outfits with lacy tops and accordion pleated skirts . . . in a dacron-polyster knit that's completely washable . . . Colors are turquoise, rosewood and eggshell . . . and we venture to suggest that whichever one you choose, it will quickly become the most-used outfit in your closet! . . . We saw a darling 2-piece dress by Leslie Fay . . . with flattering neckline, soft full sleeves, slightly shirred waist with narrow belt . . . A polyester and silk blend in beige . . . Charmante's now have a repeat (by special request) of lightweight poly-wool jersey tailored suits by Glazer of England . . . Brown, green, black camel color combinations . . . Here again a suit that's worth it's weight in gold as a wardrobe stand-by! . . . Other new arrivals at Charmante's since our last visit include one and 2-piece swimsuits by Jansen . . . We especially like a camel and black one with camisole blouson top and bikini pants . . . There's a long skirt to match, and the combination could easily be worn for evening . . . A matching one-piece suit with its own little skirt . . . and another pretty style in blue and green . . . one piece or bikini . . . with matching wrap skirt . . . A good selection of thongs from Hawaii, and more expected soon . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

Candy for the witching night! . . .

Who says Holloween's just for children? . . . Some of you will be entertaining . . . probably all of you will want to do a bit of munching between doorbell rings . . . and of course there must be a ready supply of handouts for the little trick-or-treaters! . . . That's where Purdy's come in . . . They have such perfectly yummy sweetmeats for Halloween giving and eating . . . Little boxes of different sizes with pumpkins, witches, black cats and owls on the covers . . . filled with various kinds of goodies . . . You can prepare little saran wrap bags of black and orange jelly beans . . . Spanish peanuts . . . Calling Left-Hand Tatters

By MAY E. MACLEAN

Another interesting letter from a reader this week, and I would appreciate hearing from those of you who are left-handed, especially those who do tatting.

Mrs. Wayne Stubbs of Midland, Ont., writes on behalf of her mother. "As mother would like to learn to tat and as most people are right-handed, she is more left-handed than right, doing everything but write with her left hand. The question is, can tatting be done by a left-handed person following the directions, which I presume are for right-handed people? Is there a difference in the pattern and what problems can be encountered? Mom plans on trying to teach herself to tat from books acquired over the last few years."

While I do know how to tat, I'm afraid I do not know any person who can tat left-handed, so I am unable to advise her personally. I don't think that being left-handed would make the slightest difference, but if anyone can advise Mrs. Stubbs, I am sure that she would appreciate hearing from you.

Please write to her direct. Her address is Mrs. Wayne Stubbs, 59 Sixth Street, Midland, Ont. I am sure she will be glad for any help or advice for her mother.

She would also like to know if there is any use for a number of perfectly good cardboard cylinders? These are the ones that crochet cotten is wound around. If any reader has ideas along these lines, perhaps they too can get in touch with Mrs. Stubbs.

The only idea for the moment that I can come up with is to crochet in bright wool over the cardboard for use as napkin rings. Spray painted and decorated like little drums, they would make rather nice tree ornaments.

One could cover them with fabric, stuff them with sand or cotton wool as decorative pin cushions. Perhaps it would be a good idea to publish other suggestions. Has anyone more ideas?

This week's pattern No. 7870 is a handsome placemat pattern crocheted in two colors. Choose two contrasting or toning colors to match your china and your guests will envy your skills in crochet and their elegant appearance. Four of these placemats would make a lovely gift for a dear friend.

To order Leaflet No. 7870, send 75 cents, plus a stamped, self-addressed return envelope, a long one if possible. If you do not have an envelope or stamp please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to May Maclean, Knit and Chat, 486 Montford Pl., Dollard des Ormeaux, Roxboro, Que.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery. My catalogue of Christmas Gift and Bazaar Ideas is 25 cents, plus stamped return envelope.

Dr. L. L. COLEMAN

When my doctor told me I have osteoporosis and that my bones were brittle I became terrified. I was raised on a dairy farm and I've always had a very good diet, supplemented by vitamins and minerals. One doctor suggested I get a hormone shot, but I read that there's a danger in triggering cancer. Can you explain this condition to me? — Mrs. L.G.

Dear Mrs. G.:

Osteoporosis is a condition in which there is absorption of minerals, especially calcium, from the bones. X-ray examination very characteristically shows a decrease of the density of the bone, especially in the weight-bearing part of the spinal column.

It occurs more frequently in women than in men. It rarely is seen in women before the onset of the menopause. For this reason, doctors and scientists have concentrated on the possibility that there is a relationship between the condition and a deficit of the female hormone, estrogen.

It has been established that the female sex hormones decrease the absorption from the bones and thus arrest the progression of the condition. These hormones are given under careful supervision. For it is true that some cases have been reported of the relationship between long-sustained does of estrogen and the possibility of cancer. This is, of course, markedly reduced when the patient's progress is followed intensively by the doctor. In specific cases, calcium, fluoride and vitamin D may be used to stimulate new bone formation.

Symptoms are treated only as they arise, with orthopedic supports, pain killers, heat application, massage and drugs to control muscle spasms.

Much new information is constantly being accumulated about osteoporosis. It is hoped that before long there will be even more positive ways of preventing its onset.

We have two dogs whom we adore. Our children are constantly kissing them and the dogs return their affection. We hate to stop them, but we are concerned that disease of some sort can be passed to the children. — Mrs. T.S.

Dear Mrs. S.:

As a dog lover, I can understand such display of affection to dogs, cats and other domesticated animals. Yet I do believe that children and even adults should discourage the animals from kissing or licking them on the mouth. For there are a number of parasitic infections that can be transmitted to humans. One parasite, the nematode, resides in animals and can be passed directly to humans. Fungus infections and molds can also be present around the lips and chins of animals, especially those who freely circulate in gardens and lawns.

Although these infections are relatively rare, I believe children should be discouraged from mouth-to-mouth contact with their pets.

How to Prevent Wood Decaying

By A.J. HAND

(c) 1978, Popular Science

Whenever you build outdoor structures, any wood that will come into contact with the soil must be decay resistant. If it isn't, it will rot due to the moisture and decay-producing organisms present in the soil. Fence posts, cold frames, porch and patio posts, landscaping borders and ties all require decay-resistant wood if they are going to last for more than a few years.

How to get it: There are three ways to get decay-resistant wood. You can buy wood species that are naturally rot resistant because of their natural resin content. You can buy woods that have been chemically treated with wood preservatives. Or you can buy your own perservatives and use it to treat the wood of your choice. Each approach has certain advantages and disadvantages.

Naturally decay-resistant woods: Cedar, redwood and to a lesser extent cypress are the most common woods of this type. Redwood is the most decay resistant of the three, and most people consider it the most attractive. But it is becoming scarce due to a combination of heavy cutting and legislation turning redwood forests into parks. As a result it is becoming very expensive and the quality is beginning to drop. Today you see less deep red heartwood, and a lot more of the lighter-colored sapwood, some of it dyed to make it look the way we all expect redwood to look.

Treated lumber: This stuff — ordinary lumber such as fir, pressure impregnated with perservatives — is beginning to take the place of redwood. It is cheaper, stronger, and so rot-proof that it can be used for foundations. But the treatment leaves it a sickly green color that can't compare with the look of redwood or cedar. On the other hand, you can color it with a redwood stain. That can make it look almost as good as the real thing.

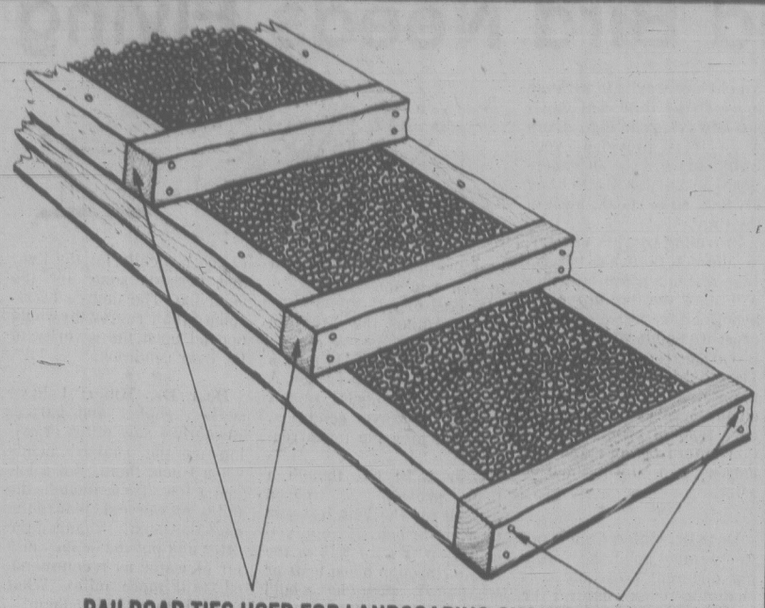

Another common form of treated lumber is the railroad tie. This is a heavy timber soaked with creosote. It sees a lot of use in landscaping. If you use ties, remember that the creosote does not penetrate throughout the wood; whenever you cut or drill a tie you should soak the wood thus exposed with creosote to insure rot resistance.

Treating your own wood: You can extend the life of any wood by treating it with preservatives. Creosote is probably the best known chemical preservative, but it has its disadvantages. It is smelly, messy, and can't be painted. It also turns the wood a dark brown color that may not fit into your color scheme.

There are clear preservatives such as pentachlorophenol (PCP) or tributylin oxide (TBTO) that solve the problems inherent in creosote. They rotproof without altering the color of the wood, and the paint very well. They are also incorporated into some exterior wood stains so you can fight rot and improve the appearance of mundane woods with a single application.

If yo use one of there perservatives, aim for maximum penetration. Soak the wood rather than brushing it wherever possible. This will provide the maximum protection. Still, don't expect wood you treat yourself to last as long as pressure-treated lumber.

One warning: Always treat wood preservatives with respect. They are essentially pesticides. Avoid inhaling them, keep them off your skin and away from children. Be especially careful with PCP; it contains minute traces of dioxin, probably the most poisonous chemical made by man.

Free for the Asking

By HARRIET HART

The Canadian Mental Health Association, in co-operation with Health and Welfare Canada, has published an important new series about family life with children. The series comprises 10 leaflets.

The four page leaflet What Will They Do To Me In The Hospital? stresses that a young child's stay in a hospital does not have to be a distressing experience. How your child will handle this period will largely depend on his age and how well you prepare him. Pre-schoolers need most help.

The leaflet suggests some of the many questions you should ask the doctor before your child enters hospital. Fear of the unknown is usually worse than worry about what is ahead.

Tell your child what to expect. For example, an eight-year-old should know about the anesthetic that will put him to sleep, how long he will likely have to be in hospital, and that his family will be with him as much as possible.

When you visit your youngster in hospital, tell him what is happening at home and bring him a surprise as well as a familiar toy.

There is much more helpful advice in the leaflet.

To obtain a copy of the leaflet, send your request along with a large (No. 10) self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Canadian Mental Health Association, 2160 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont. M4S 2Z3.

Please indicate your postal code and allow at least two to three weeks for delivery.

You may already know that raisin prices are expected to skyrocket because the crop was severely damaged by heavy rains in September. If there are raisins in your cupboard, keep them in an airtight container to keep them from drying out. If that's how they are already, a slice of apple in the container will bring back moisture to the raisins in a day. Leave the apple in no longer for it may become moldy.

Bunion-Bound Bird Needs Flying Time

Dear Dr. Miller: I have a bird who had a bunion, or at least that's what my brother, a foot doctor for human types, called it. He had me soak and treat it and then he finally took care of it. Then he swore afterwards, "Never again!" Next time he says it is the veterinarian or forget it. Of course, I'm the optimistic type that there won't be a next time. Is there anything I can do to improve my lovebird's feet so there won't be a next time? — N.M.

Dear N.M.: We pet-bird podiatrists prescribe taking the pressure off. The feet, that is. An obvious way is to arrange more flying time, but that's not always practical. Even when it is provided, your bird, unless it is an exceptional aerialist, will still be on his feet, so to speak, most of the time.

Providing perches of varying diameters such as natural (non-resinous) tree branches will allow the feet to receive beneficial exercise and the pressure points will be slightly varied from time to time. The other factor is, of course, maintaining scrupulously clean perches since dirty ones tend to promote infection before bunions and calluses can form and/or after.

Dear Dr. Miller: Fancy, my fancy-tailed goldfish, is looking different these days. Is changing color natural or could this be some sort of disease? In the three years I have had him, he has always seemed in good dhape, although his shape has always been a little peculiar. — C.A.

Dear C.A.: Goldfish color changes may be due to environmental effects including lighting and nutrition. Diseases, too, can cause color changes in specific (affected) parts of the skin or a generalized depigmentation related to poor condition.

A local expert would have to determine the facts in Fancy's case.

Dear Dr. Miller: My mutt's losing hair along his sides. A while ago the doctor said it was due to a liver condition. Can you give me more reasons?

Dear N.J.: No, though a liver problem is reason enough for the hair loss you have described. If your veterinarian is sure this is the cause (through blood tests or whatever), then he would probably recommend medication basically for the liver and perhaps some for the skin, too. The degree of response (hair regrowth) would depend upon the severity of the liver condition.

Dear Dr. Miller: I have snakes, gopher and garter. Recently I saw mites crawling on the snakes' heads when I held them. Not a lot, just a few. Then, though, the mites got worse. I cleaned the cage thoroughly, changed the litter and put the snakes in a jar of water as recommended. Still more mites. What can I do to get rid of them?

Dear L.E.: Ophionyssus natricis, the snake mite, is not only a nuisance to snakes, it can be dangerous because of blood loss or because it can carry dangerous bacteria. Two chemical products which will eliminate the mites (without eliminating the snake if used properly) are Dibrone and Diazinon. Either product must be carefully and properly diluted and then used as a spray which may be repeated once, three weeks later. (Chemically impregnated fly strips, hung nearby, may eventually eliminate the mites but this product can also cause toxic reactions in some reptiles, so it is better not used.)

DEAR DR. MILLER: What's a feather cyst and what do you do with them?— T.Y.

DEAR T.Y.: Feather cysts contain primarily one or more undeveloped feathers within a feather follicle. They should be opened, cleaned out, cauterized and occasionally, if hemorrhage occurs, they must be packed and sutured. If the patient is presented in good condition, procedure should be simple and the rest minimal. (The patient, incidentally, is invariably a bird . . .)

REAR-ENDER

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A Wichita minister who criticized use of the word "ass" in a production of Peter Pan is off-base, says a professor of English at the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

Dr. David Weinglass said when author Sir James Barrie had Tinker Bell calling Wendy "a silly ass," he meant a donkey because the word means nothing else in England.

Weinglass said the American use of the word to mean the human posterior is a sloppy use of the British term "arse."

Rev. Ron Adrian, who heads Wichita's Concerned Citizens for Community Standards, wrote a letter to the editor of the Wichita Eagle complaining about the play because the script uses that word.

Bio-dex

Oct. 29-78 — By Ken J. Michaels — Your computerized biorhythm

©BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978 — Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:
Locate your month of birth. The dots on each graph highlight your biorhythm readouts. Check the scales on the left or right for your Intellectual, Emotional and Physical factors, from 1 to 5. Add these three numbers to obtain your Bio-dex. The Bio-dex is computed on average population age based on official Government statistics.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- A friend in hospital is much worse off than you. Visit him and forget your own troubles.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- Some of your ideas seem outmoded. Don't let society tear away your principles.

11-15 Positive Cycle- Enjoy a relaxing day off. Your geniune positive energy will spread to your family and friends.

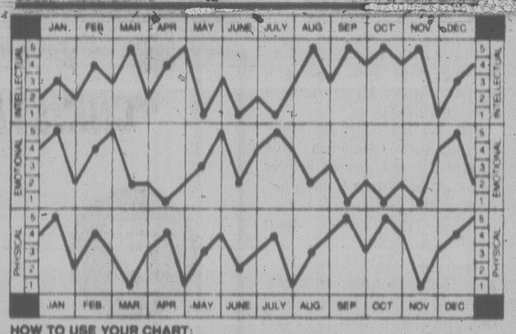

Fall cleanups pose special dangers when your Bio-dex is low. A critical physical level and a blocked eavestrough don't mix. Power tools and a moment of impatience on a low emotional day can cause a serious accident. Intellectual readouts of 1 or 2 points could cause you to make a dangerous electrical wiring mistake. Take special care or postpone the job if your Bio-dex is unfavorable!

Add these three numbers to obtain your Bio-dex. The Bio-dex is computed on average population age based on official Government statistics.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- A young person will test your temper and you'll have to work extra hard to avoid a bad scene.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- If you plan to go for a walk or car ride, you may see something that will cause you to despair.

11-15 Positive Cycle- If money matters need attention, check those end-of-the-month bills today and you won't miss a thing.

I get many letters from readers asking me to provide them with a personal Bio-dex chart. Sorry, I'm not in that end of the business. For those who wish to chart their biorythms a number of kits and calculators are on the market - some as low as $10. Always remember that having your personal chart is one thing, but how you interpret it is the important point. Good day or not, always remember to use common sense and don't look for easy answers to your problems.

DEAR ABBY: I went to a doctor who specializes in fast weight loss. He took a special interest in me and said it wouldn't do me any good to take off weight unless I kept it off, and in order to do that we would have to find out why I was overeating, and deal with that problem.

Well, he asked me a lot of questions about my personal life, and I told him the truth. Then he told me that I was using food to compensate for sex — which I've had practically none of. I am 24, unmarried and never had a steady boyfriend, but I have had three or four sex experiences which I thought would get me a boyfriend, but never did.

This doctor said he would be glad to make up for the deficiency of sex in my life if I would take his last appointment every day. He said flat out that this has nothing to do with romance, it was purely part of the treatment, but he wouldn't charge me for it.

I am not all that excited about sex, but I would like to lose about 50 pounds. What should I do?

FAT

DEAR FAT: Decline his offer and report him to the ethics committee of the county medical association. It appears that your doctor has a problem which he hopes to solve by using YOU.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 59-year-old man and was a pretty good welterweight boxer in my younger days.

The place where I work has about 70 employees — men and women — and when you retire, they give you a big dinner and a gift. Then you have to give a little farewell speech.

I am only a common laborer and I'm not used to making speeches. Not only that, I'm afraid I might cry.

I considered getting drunk that night, but then I might really have a crying jag. Or maybe the best idea would be to just say I was sick and skip the whole thing. But at times I think I really would like to go through with the party and be honored.

I've got three years to prepare myself. What should I do?

ASHAMED

DEAR ASHAMED: When your day comes, by all means, go! And don't worry about crying. If you shed a few sentimental tears — so what? Expressing honest emotions is nothing to be ashamed of. And as for the speech, bear in mind this simple formula: Be sincere. Be brief. And be seated.

DEAR ABBY: I noticed a letter in your column from LEARNED MY LESSON, which dealt with VD and its consequences if untreated.

I am the mother of a fine son who was the last person in the world one would suspect of having VD — an honor student, outstanding athlete and popular kid. But he had it — when he was 16. I regret to say that he didn't come to his father or me when he suspected something was wrong. Instead he went to our family physician who treated him without our knowledge or consent. We learned about it years later when our son told us.

Abby, in my view, a doctor has no business treating a minor for anything without informing the parents, regardless of what the law says. I think parents have the right to know what is going on in the lives of their children, and if the law states that children can be treated for VD without the knowledge or consent of their parents, then the law should be changed!

If you have the courage to print this, please don't use my name.

CONCERNED MOM

DEAR MOM: Ideally, all children should confide in their parents, but, unfortunately, many do not. I shudder to think of how many minors with VD would go untreated if they had to tell their parents.

DEAR ABBY: Some weeks ago you ran a letter from a lady who claimed flatly that everyone in the world knows the Swiss to be closer with a centime, tighter with a token, if you please, than any other people. That statement has rankled me ever since.

As one whose ancestors wore the tartans and kilts, I take umbrage at her claim, for the whole world knows that the canny Scots are the most penurious people in the world.

As a matter of fact, 'tis common ken here in bonnie Arizona that the Grand Canyon was dug in a fortnight when my maternal great-great-grandfather, Pedro Gonzales McLeod (Pronounced McCloud), dropped a nickel, and it rolled down a gopher hole.

DALE CANNON

DEAR ABBY: I know that etiquette demands that all personal letters and social notes be handwritten, and it is considered bad manners to use a typewriter for such things, but here is my plight.

I suffer from arthritis in the fingers of both hands, and it is extremely difficult for me to use a pen. However, I am able to use a typewriter, so I have been typing all my personal correspondence.

Is it necessary for me to apologize and explain that I know better, but because of my arthritis I beg to be excused?

KNOTTED KNUCKLES

DEAR KNOTTED: No. Regardless of what the etiquette books say, circumstances and common sense should be your guide.

GARDENING
jack beastall

Catching Up with the Fall Work

Time becomes precious to the home gardener as October nears its end. The return to standard time eliminates the hours of daylight after supper, so that gardening for many is limited to part of Saturday and Sunday.

It is now more essential than ever to determine priorities. Rain and wind will be more frequent and each work schedule should be sufficiently flexible to take full advantage of suitable periods of weather.

The catch-up jobs waiting to be done will vary from garden to garden. Unlike gardeners in other parts of Canada who have already finished their gardening for this year, local gardeners are working on their fall and winter gardens.

Those of us working clay soils are readying the planks, shiplap, or three-ply sheets from which we shall work when planting shrubs and trees we expect to receive in the next week or so.

The planting holes are already prepared and compost mixed with the piles of topsoil. These heaps of soil have been dampened by recent rains and are now covered with plastic sheets to prevent saturation as rainy periods become more frequent.

Success in planting comes when the soil is packed tightly around the rootball of shrubs or the bare roots of trees. This is best done with the hands, an almost impossible job when the soil is really wet and the reason protection from rain is so frequently stressed.

The canes of raspberries, loganberries, blackberries and related bramble fruits which fruitd this yar will not furit again.

These should be romovd at once if not already attended to, cutting each one about one inch below soil level to prevent insects and disease spores from entreing the cut surfaces.

The new canes on raspberries, those which will fruit next year, can now be shorened to a convenient height of five to six feet. This prevents wind damage over winter and encourages the production of fruiting spurs instead of increased length.

If the raspberry canes are less than five feet in hieght, just remove the growing tip.

Since raspberies are surface rooting, digging around the plants can cause severe root damage and cane dieback. Weeding is carefully done by hand and the whole bed covered with about an inch or so of good compost.

Strong new canes on brambles are selected for next year's crop. It is wise to include one or two more than needed in case of winter damage. The other new growths made this year are cut off just below soil level.

The selected growths are looslely tied with string in a bundle which is attached to the lower wire of the support at about 18 inches above soil level. At this height they are reasonable safe from winter damage.

New compost heaps are built now to provide humus at spring planting time. These heaps will contain all the waste plant material collected over the past two months plus the leaves that are yet to come.

Fallen leaves contain minerals and chemicals not needed by the plants for food that is now going into storage for spring growth. The color of the leaves tells the soil chemist their exact contents, all of which have been taken from the soil and are returned as the fallen leaves decay.

Complete details with drawings on the making of compost are contained in a pamphlet published by Project Recycle, 4026 Borden St., which can be picked up the next time you take your old newspapers for recycling. The cost is just the price for printing on recycled paper. Ask for the pamphlet entitled Composting, a Practical Guide.

The fall and winter vegetable garden is probably the most important part of the garden at the moment.

To gather vegetables as needed during inclement weather it is essential to have a good footing from which to work. No gardener or cook finds pleasure in wading through mud regardless of how good the fresh vegetables may be.

Take the time now to level the soil in empty spaces and palace boards, planks, or three-ply trimmings, beside the rows of parsnips, leeks, kale, winter cabbage, Brussels sprouts, winter radish, Swiss chard, and other greens.

The health of the family and the food budget were the main considerations when these crips were sown, but too often much is wasted because no provision has been made to keep out of the mud when harvesting.

Yellow leaves will be found on the ground around cabbage and other brassicas. Collect these and add to the compost heap, and remove any leaves from the plants which have lost their green coloring. Frost on these old leaves when falln causes unpleasant odors.

At the same time, tread the soil firmly around these plants before they beome loosened by November gales. Loosened roots result in poor growth, soft heads on cabbages, and loose Brussels sprouts.

If the garden is exposed to strong winds tie each plant to a stake driven firmly into the soil. This is a common sight on farms along the English Channel, both in southern England and northern France.

Small bud clusters are evident on sprouting broccoli. Gather these and cook then with other vegetables when the pickings are small. They do not increase in size but will soon go the flower. New clusters will form as soon as the others have been picked.

The recent rain showers have caused a mass of weed seeds to germinate. While the soil is comparatively dry, keep the hoe at work in the vegetable garden and the ornamental plantings. A half hour now with the how will save a week's work next spring.

Lawns still have to be mowed, and it is common to hear lawnmowers operating at Christmas and New Year's. Choose a time when the grassed areas are dry and the soil not so saturated as to leave depressions from boots or mower wheels.

As leaf fall increases, frequently check all low growing plants such as rock plants, prostrate junipers. Remove fallen leaves from these plants otherwise the foilage will be damaged as the leaves collect moisture and start to rot.

If any repairs are needed on fences, get them done as soon as possible. It is surprising the number of fences which topple in the first November gale.

When the winds and rain come there is great satisfaction in knowing that all the odd jobs have been attended to. With careful planning in the next few weeks, and taking advantage of all bright fall weather, that satisfaction can be yours.

Work For Week

Chrysanthemums will be blooming all month. Cut all good flowers before discarding tops. Later the newer varieties need winter storage of roots. Hardy old-timers are lifted and divided in spring.

Cultivate soil around winter vegetables and hand weed the new sowings made in August and September.

Pull up squash vines and others which now still probably have felt the light ground frosts of past week. All this material is cut into smaller pieces for adding to compost heap. If amounts are large, a tiller with cutters operating will make short work of the job.

In greenhouse which can be kept frost-free all winter, sow seeds of radish, lettuce, endive, swiss chard, green onions. Given space, careful watering, ventilation and good light these fresh saladings are valuable in winter meals.

Some of the above list can also be grown in limited way in a frost-free sunroom if light is unobtructed.

ENGLISH PLACEMENT TEST
POST-SECONDARY STUDENTS

Students entering most post-secondary institutions in B.C. are now required to write an English Placement Test. Scores from this test will be used to assist in assigning students to English courses appropriate to their needs.

The test will be offered at 6:45 p.m. on November 1, 1978 at Camosun College, Room Y310, 1950 Lansdowne Road, Victoria, B.C., Phone 592-1281, Local 241.

The test will also be offered at other colleges throughout B.C. Detailed information regarding the requirements, purpose and format of the English Placement Test may be obtained in person from Student Information Services at post-secondary institutions.

All students planning to enter a post-secondary institution in January of 1979 are encouraged to write the English Placement Test on November 1, 1978.

Himalayas dramatic highlight

Kashmir: Still 'paradise on earth'

The seventeenth century Moghul emperor Shahjahan called it "a paradise on earth." Kashmir is certainly unsurpassed in beauty: a green valley full of placid lakes, bubbling springs, meadows, apple orchards and Moghul gardens of unbelievable beauty. The scenic splendor of the valley of Kashmir is dramatically highlighted by the magnificent range of mountains that surround it — the Himalayas.

Golf course in Gulmarg at the foot of Himalayas

THE HIMALAYAS stretch for 2,400 kilometres along the entire northern boundary of India, from Darjeeling in the east to Kashmir in the west. The Himalayas, with some of the highest peaks in the world, have something for everyone. The artist can revel in the gorgeous scenery and the nature lover in the flora and fauna. There are ruins for the archeologist and rare birds and animals for the wildlife enthusiast, for mountaineering, trekking and fishing. It's even possible to ski, skate, water ski and golf. While you may not like to term it a "spiritual experience," you can't help but be affected by the exhaulting impact of the Himalayas.

KASHMIR IS a good base for your Himalayan holiday. Its capital, Srinagar, is only two hours by air from Delhi. The best seasons to visit Kashmir are in spring, mid-March to June, when the flowers are in bloom or in fall, September-October, when fruit is in abundance and the weather delightful.

There are many good hotels in Srinagar, including the Oberoi Palace Hotel, once a maharaja's palace. However, if you'd like a change in pace you could rent a houseboat. The houseboats are moored on Lake Dal and Lake Nagin, and on the banks of the river Jhelum. They come in four categories with rates varying according to the facilities offered.

A LUXURY class houseboat, fully furnished, includes a spacious living room, dining room, bedrooms with bath attached, a sundeck and three servants to cook your meals. You also get a private shikara, a small gondola-like boat. The price for all this luxury is less than $10 per day, per person, all meals included! You can relax in your houseboat and wait for Srinagar to come to you. Vendors, in shikaras piled high with flowers, fruit, carpets, clothing, jewellery and handicrafts will bring their wares to you.

FOR A GLIMPSE of Moghul splendor in modern times visit the series of terraced gardens around Dal Lake. The gardens were laid out over 300 years ago by the Moghul emperors.

IF YOU like horseback riding, you'll probably enjoy the trip to Gulmarg. Gulmarg is 32 kilometres from Srinagar and the last few kilometres of the journey may be made on horseback. At an altitude of 2,750 meters, Gulmarg has one of the highest golf courses in the world and a budding ski resort.

THE ADVENTUROUS traveller may be interested in making the two-day journey to Ladakh, nestled in the remote regions of the Karakoram mountains. Ladakh's close ties to Tibet in the past are reflected in the culture, lifestyle and architecture of the people of Ladakh. Since Tibet is closed to the world, this is the closest thing to Tibetan culture that one can see.

IF THIS IS the kind of holiday you're looking for, and you have another week or two, go east — to Darjeeling. It's a delightful city built on the mountain slopes. With 4,000 species of plants and ferns, 600 types of birds and many rare animals, it's a fascinating place. And it's not just another hill town: its people, ways of life and handicrafts are as different as can be from those of Kashmir.

Many people from Darjeeling work in the tea estates in the district. Darjeeling tea is a household word in most parts of the world and you might enjoy visiting a tea estate during your stay.

THE HIMALAYAN Mountaineering Institute just outside Darjeeling offers a 35-day course in mountaineering. The first director of the institute was Tenzing Norgay, the sherpa guide who along with Sir Hillary was the first to conquer the Everest. Many pieces of memorablia, relics of their historic climb, are on display. The Institute also houses a mountain zoo which includes tigers, leopards, pandas and black bears, to name a few.

PALM SPRINGS, WHERE JUST A LITTLE MAKES A BIG DIFFERENCE.

Just a little gesture can make a big difference. People remembering your name from year to year. Fresh flowers blooming in your room each day. Babysitters for very special evenings. They're the little things that can make a difference in your vacation. The kinds of things you'll discover in many of the small hotels of Palm Springs.

We call them our "Small Discoveries," the unique little places known only to people who've been coming here for years. They make it a point to stay small (from 10 to 50 rooms). To retain their individuality. And yours. They cater to people who want to be treated lavishly. And people who want to be alone.

Some of them welcome small children and big dogs. Some of them are outright bargains. And others are the last word in luxury. None of them is far from the things Palm Springs is renowned for—the ambience, the recreation, the shopping, the nightlife, our world-famous Aerial Tramway. One of them is right for you. Discover which one. Now.

Kronberg Castle, most famed as the home of an imaginary prince

Danish Riviera trumpets classics with modern touch

By DAVID BUTWIN

COPENHAGEN, DENMARK — The Danish Riviera, which stretches 48 or 64 kilometres north of Copenhagen, may not call up images of warm beaches, seaside cafes, or palm-lined promenades. At least it didn't to me the other morning when a Danish friend suggested we vacate Copenhagen for the day and explore this Nordic Cote d'Azur.

He had to do some swift talking to get me away from Copenhagen, whose konditoreis (pastry shops) alone justify its existence, but he promised modern art museums, Hamlet's castles quiet harbors, and beech forests. And there are sights he didn't promise, too.

AS YOU PICK up the coastal road north of Copenhagen there begins a parade of impressive and highly visible mansions — villas, really, their blanched white walls and tiled roofs hinting strongly to the other Riviera. Suddenly the familiar Danish Modern angularity juts into view — several houses done by the noted designer Arnie Jacobsen.

HALFWAY up the coast, opposite a packed little harbor at Rungsted, we turned left into an unmarked driveway beside a rambling white stucco house. The house belonged to the Danish writer Isak Dinesen (1883-1962), who lived there her last 30 years after returning from East Africa. Although it is private and in the care of a special foundation, the surrounding garden and forests are very much public — a fact even many Danes do not know.

BARONESS Karen Blixen (Isak Dinesen was her pen name), who loved the nature of East Africa as well as coastal Denmark, left most of her property as a bird sanctuary. Let it remain wild, she willed. On a pond in back, a miniature platformed house floated silently on the water — a roosting place for ducks. We followed a muddy path beneath ancient beeches and finally arrived at a clearing shaded by a single, noble tree. Beneath it lay a large gravestone etched only with KAREN BLIXEN.

HERE AND there along the woodland trails stand green wooden benches, each dedicated to a different member of the Dinesen household staff. "Madam Carlson Boenk," says the white lettering on one.

Mrs. Carlson happened to be home. She asked us in — a rare occurrence, my friend assured me — and showed us through her late employer's house, little changed in the last 16 years. Karen Blixen's favorite summer curtains — white, too long, originally made for a country castle — still hung on the windows and trailed on the floor.

HER STUDY, where she wrote for 30 years, has a corner desk that looks through a window to the sailboats and blue sound across the road. On the wall is a painting of the author in a black shawl; her large dark eyes and hollow cheeks made her look almost a caricature. From 1914 to 1931 she lived on a coffee plantation in British East Africa (now Kenya), and in 1937 she published Out of Africa. On the wall are Masai tribal shields and spears and portraits of African friends.

WE THEN headed up the Riviera toward a remarkable museum called Louisiana. Built 20 years ago beside the sea in modern low-lying Danish style, Louisiana has nothing to do with the French Quarter or the bayous. Supposedly the 19th-century nobleman who owned the main house on the grounds (which serves today as the entrance and gift shop) had three wives named Louise.

Louisiana was the first, and remains the best, modern museum in Denmark. Most of the permanent works were down that day while a strange and fanciful children's exhibit, full of stuffed animals and trap doors, was finishing a two-month stand. In a week Andy Warhol would be there to open a one-man show running until Nov. 26. From Nov. 15 to Dec. 15, an avant-garde U.S. film series is scheduled, and from Dec. 16 to Feb. 2, surrealist works from New York's Museum of Modern Art.

AT TIMES, Louisiana seems as much an amusement park as a museum. On the lawn, children bounced among Moore and Arp sculptures. Beside a pond a sign in English proclaims, "Who Needs the Pacific Ocean?" while kids cross the narrow, reedy waterway on a raft propelled by rope pulleys.

At the northeast tip of this island of Zealand, Kronborg Castle stands guard over the quaint, cobbled town of Elsinore. Once a fortress and later a royal residence, alternately ravaged by fires and attacking Swedes, Kronborg is of course best known as the setting for Shakespeare's Hamlet. Just inside the main wall there is a bas-relief likeness of the Bard noting that he got his story line from the legend of a prince named Amleth who lived on Jutland before the Viking age.

DOUBTLESS the best news at Kronborg since a renovation was undertaken in 1925 is that Hamlet will be performed in the huge castle courtyard next summer for the first time in more than 25 years. It will be no ordinary production: it never has been. Olivier and Leigh played Hamlet and Ophelia in 1937, Burton and Bloom in 1954. Derek Jacobi of I, Claudius fame will be the 1979 Hamlet.

Our last stop, toward dusk, was at Fredensborg Palace, home in the spring and fall to Queen Margrethe II. The palace is open to the public only in July, but we were content to stroll the expansive grounds, listen to the crows, and watch the lights come on in the castle. You can't do that in Cannes.

Festival upcoming

PORT ELIZABETH — The Port Elizabeth Autumn Festival, which already has become a hit both with South Africans and overseas visitors, is to be held for the third time next April (it's autumn in South Africa when it's spring in Canada).

Many of the events at the second festival, held this year, were wide open for the public to come and go as they pleased. Thousands of people responded, particularly to see the mammoth carnival on the King's Beach lawns and the boat show, each of which drew 15,000 people, and the Transport Through the Ages exhibition that attracted more than 6,000.

Port Elizabeth, also known as the "Friendly City" in South Africa, also held its annual Courtesy Week during the festival and this resulted in a boost for both visitors and residents.

Geological wonderland casts a spell in Chile

By BARBARA HERRERA

CALAMA, Chile — The sun here in this part of the vast Atacama Desert shines like fire but the air during Chile's winter is as cold as the copper which enriches the ground and turns some of the hills an icy green.

The sky is very blue with white clouds near the eternally snow-covered cone of the Lincancabur volcano which rises to 19,426 feet on the far-off Andean horizon.

We crossed a bridge at Topater, spanning a grass-lined stream, the Rio Loa, at the southern edge of this oasis town. Here once were entrenched the first Bolivian troops to engage Chilean soldiers in the War of the Pacific in 1879. Had the fortunes of war turned differently, Bolivia might now control this territory. Instead, Chile won—and the Atacama—with its nitrates and copper—was hers.

WE WERE headed southeast toward the village of San Pedro de Atacama, 96 kilometresaway—12 U.S. journalists far from the beaten tourist track, bumping along in an ancient blue Mercedes bus at 96 kmh over a steep, narrow road of precipitous grades and curves.

We were passing through a vast unadorned waste of greys and beiges, cinders and dust that has never known rain. Some say it's the driest spot on earth. Nothing lives there.

WE DID NOT see an animal, a reptile, a plant. Not even an insect to smash itself against the clean windshield of the bus.

As the asphalt finished and the bus ascended into the black hills, the sky became an intense blue — bluer than any I have ever seen.

Soon we discovered a geological wonderland of fantastic landscapes, clean air and luminous colors. A place where miners skilled in modern technology sweat for hard-earned pesos with which to buy refrigerators and televisions. A place where the people of the cordillera, heirs of an ancient culture, the Kunzas, herd llamas and dance the cachimbo as their ancestors did 400 years ago.

WE SAW THE dried corpses of the Kunzas' ancestors, mummified. And met the venerable Jesuit padre who unearthed those corpses.

The bus advanced with caution, the driver honking the [illegible] rounding sharp curves, the engine laboring up the grades in second gear. Dust swirled into the bus, parching lips and filling nostrils.

Then the bus accelerated and we came into a new canyon where, in sharp contrast to the flat altiplano, velvety sand dunes, tinted with the changing, irridescent colors of dark pearls, stretched before us. The dunes are protected by high, crusty mesas the color and texture of sandpaper. And covering the entire landscape, a silvery dusting of salt glistens and sparkles like snow in the sunlight.

TIME AND the wind, among other elements, have worked together in the Valley of the Moon to shape rocks which sweep into the air in the form of dramatic figures.

We jolted along the washboard road which descended into canyon after canyon of similarly magnificent vistas. Finally, there appeared a green place, an oasis and it too was a welcome sight. Once again we crossed the winding Rio Loa and we were in San Pedro de Atacama with its little pink houses held together with mortar and shaded by the droopy green of pepper trees.

PEDRO DE Valdivia, who conquered these parts for Charles V of Spain, lived in San Pedro de Atacama. His house is here, near the town's plaza. Across the square is a church built in 1541. The architecture is the same as that of the rest of the town, except for the bell tower. The roof is framed in wood from the saquaro cactus. And presiding over the church is the most famous man in all of this area, Father Gustav Le Paige.

I found Father Le Paige in the courtyard of the archaeological museum across from the church. He sat in the sun-dappled shade of a pepper tree sorting Indian arrowheads. The padre, 78, has the hard, leathery hands and dark, sun-seamed face of the local people. But then you get closer and see his blue eyes.

FATHER LE Paige is a Belgian Jesuit who has outlasted by 24 years the predictions of superiors who warned he wouldn't stay in this desert three months. He stayed. He ministered in the little white church to the Kunzas, teaching them to see Jesus in the volcano and upgrading their education and sanitation.

Meanwhile, he discovered 45 major archaeological sites. He uncovered the clay pots and gold vases and — most amazingly — the dried corpses of Incan and pre-Incan people who lived here. He nagged until the Chilean government built a museum to house his finds.

AND SO Gustav Le Paige, the blue-eyed gringo Jesuit whose mind is a storehouse of Indian antiquity, has become a national hero in Chile. Compliments to his work draw his strong protest. "You exaggerate my work," the padre said, speaking in Spanish. "It was Divine Providence that brought me to these people poor and forgotten here in the desert of Atacama . . ."

The museum building is designed in a modern, octagonal shape. It preserves the Incan and pre-Incan cultures which existed here in an amazing clutter of over 5,000 human skulls plus pottery and animal bones, among other artifacts.

Long wooden tables line the walls. Sitting on them, with knees drawn against their chests in the fetal position, are hundreds of dried human cadavers. Flesh does not decay in this dry desert air. Some of these mummies — or, more correctly, dried corpses — date back 600 to 800 years ago.

Scrupulously clean, modern, efficient

New Zealand microcosm of beauties of world

By VIRGIL PINKLEY

AUCKLAND, New Zealand — A legend here says that in the beginning God created just New Zealand. He looked at it carefully and was so pleased with what He had done that He then went ahead and created the rest of the world.

And one might think that, as He created man in His image, He created the world in New Zealand's image, for this rather small nation is a microcosm of the beauties of the whole world.

There are deep fjords, the snow-capped Southern Alps, geyser plumes of boiling water and plopping mud pots, caves and a glowworm grotto, willow-lined rivers, glaciers, green valleys, deep blue lakes, and beautiful natural harbors — all still as uncluttered and unspoiled as on the day of creation.

Blessed by the nature of its people as well as its scenic wonders, New Zealand manages with only three million population to be a scrupulously clean, modern, efficient nation with a remarkable standard of living.

Despite a population only about that of the city of Los Angeles, this country has excellent roads, modern communications, marvelous harbors and extensive port facilities.

The visitor encounters warmth and gracious courtesy as New Zealanders extend a sincere welcome and go out of their way to be friendly and helpful. The custom here is to tip very little and for very few services — which makes the excellent, personalized attention all the more noticeable.

New Zealand consists of two large islands, the north and the south, which are divided by straits 27 kilometres wide at the narrowest point. A rather newly formed nation, it is considered to have been attached to Australia thousands of years ago. Mountains here are still rising and shifting a bit, and both New Zealand and Australia reflect volcanic action in their terrain.

There are between 60 and 70 million sheep here, and this is one of the world's largest exporters of lamb, mutton, wool, beef and dairy and agricultural products. New Zealand has huge deposits of coal, mines a considerable amount of gold, and uses thermal power to a far greater extent than most nations. In fact, about eight per cent of the nation's energy comes from the steam which is converted into electricity.

New Zealand has had gold rushes comparable to those in California and the Klondike. An interesting gold rush town, Arrowtown, has preserved the relics and the atmosphere of those days for the visitor.

Surprisingare the gargatuan sequoia trees found here, which in fact grow taller and larger in a shorter time here than in the United States. Surprising to the Englishman must be the city of Christchurch, where every street offers gardens and parks to rival any in England. The harbor cities remind one of San Francisco or Hong Kong, and Wellington includes a cable car that climbs to a vantage point where the crystal clear nights permit full enjoyment of the city and harbor lights below and the Southern Cross in the skies above.

The fascinating history and retained culture of the early Maori natives forms an interesting backdrop for the marvels of modern New Zealand. Performances of Maori traditional songs, dances and crafts are presented in theatres at Rotorua.

Most of the modern settlers in New Zealand, excepting the 250,000 Maoris, came from Great Britain or the Netherlands. There are no racial problems here; there is total integration. Lacking great extremes of wealth or poverty, New Zealanders consider each other as equals. "Everybody speaks to everybody," they say, and no class distinctions are observed. The pace of life is easy and people place a high premium on leisure time.

Few other places in the world offer such excellent hunting and the world's largest fish are caught in the waters in and around New Zealand. Think of it; there are rainbow trout in the lakes and rivers that go up to 65 pounds in size.

The country produces world champion middle and distance runners, top performers in swimming, crews that win international competitions, some of the fastest racehorses in the world, and one of the greatest rugby teams — the All Blacks. It was New Zealand that produced Sir Edmund Hillary, the first man to conquer Mt. Everest.

Living expenses here are much lower than in most countries today. The average worker pays about one-third of his total income in all types of taxes. It was in New Zealand that women first gained full suffrage. The country has been a leader in social welfare programs.

Magic flows in Yugoslavia

By BETTY PEACH

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia — Part of the magic of this industrial Balkan city is in the hands of a deceptively quick businessman.

He is Slavko Jagar, sales manager for British Airways here, with offices in the marble and glass Hotel Zagreb Inter-Continental, a businessman's haven.

Jagar is a darkly good-looking man with a ready smile, fashionably dressed in casual clothing, and he carries a briefcase full of business papers and several decks of cards. But Jagar is no gambler.

He is an amateur magician of professional quality, and he plays at it after business luncheons or cocktail parties. Occasionally he performs for clubs or for children's festivities. But it is strictly a hobby.

Most Yugoslavians I have met who speak English sound like North Americans rather than Englishmen. This is particularly true of tour guides and of the men who staff British Airways offices in this country. I have mistaken three for North Americans. Slavko Jagar is one of them.

His introduction of his magic tricks is sly. At a luncheon table, he turned two of three empty glasses upside down and asked the Dallas travel writer beside him to turn each glass over twice and end with all three glasses right side up. Sportsmanlike, he demonstrated how it is done.

Soon we were all trying repeatedly, and always without success. Only New Yorker John Lampl succeeded after several tries.

Jagar took a deck of cards, fanned to reveal a standard deck. He snuffled, cut, and fanned the deck open. Each card was the ace of spades.

And so it went, one card trick after another, all so smoothly done no one could see how any worked. Coins disappeared, to reappear under a coffee cup, or in a shirt pocket. An offered handkerchief was folded, cut in half, unfolded and returned whole. Pick-a-card-any-card tricks came and went in mystifying succession.

Jagar had as much fun fooling the table of travel writers as we had in being fooled.

History adds sting of pain to Nagasaki's Peace Park

By PHILIP SOUSA

NAGASAKI, Japan — There are instances when the poignancy of history adds meaning to a travel experience.

Often a sting of pain is involved. Not the physical type, but the touch of sadness you sense when you realise that the ground upon which you trod was once visited by tragedy.

Usually it is just a statue or a plaque overshadowed by more traditional visitor attractions. But including the tragic reminders in your sightseeing diet, I submit, will carry you beyond the surface to the soul of a people or place.

EXAMPLES abound.

There is the Monument to the Heroes of the Ghetto in the old Jewish quarter of Warsaw. The John F. Kennedy Memorial Plaza in Dallas. Romie's Coliseum. The USS Arizona Memorial in Pearl Harbor. Place de la Guillotine in Paris.

And there is Nagasaki, where 33 years ago, death rained down from the sky in the shape of an atomic bomb that practically wiped the town off the face of the earth.

THE TERRIFYING blast Aug. 9, 1945, instantly killed 25,000 persons, wounded 40,000 others, and destroyed 18,000 buildings. The number of dead attributed to the bomb has since more than tripled.

Ironically, learning these details came on the heels of two delightful discoveries: The finest ryokan (Japanese-style inn) I've ever stayed at, and one of the most splendid Japanese meals I've ever had — the latter in a centuries-old structure that is an historical site.

BUT THEN, it would seem that irony has long ridden on the coattails of Nagasaki, an attactive city on subtropical Kyushu, Japan's southernmost island.

From 1633 to 1855 — when the government banned all other ports to foreigners — this one remained open to Chinese and Dutch traders.

Thus, for more than two centuries, Nagasaki was the only gate through which western culture filtered into the land. In fact, the town was the only point of contact with the outside world.

IN 1549, in nearby Kagoshima, the man who became St. Francis Xavier introduced Christianity to Japan.

Other foreigners chose Nagasaki as the entry point for their ideas and methods for everything from science to commerce.

Notable among them was Thomas Glover, a British entrepreneur who more than a century ago, brought the first locomotive to this country, turned tea into a major export commodity, started a mint, and contributed significantly to the modernization of the shipbuilding and coal-mining industries.

TODAY, HIGH on a tree-crowded hill ovverlooking the busy harbor, the 115-year-old Glover mansion is one of the top local attractions.

The puzzle is: Why, with all these and other links with the West — to say nothing of the locals' acquaintance with the friendly disposition toward foreigners — was Nagasaki chosen, along with neighboring Hiroshima, as an A-bomb target?

Military strategists, diplomats, politicians and others may be able to supply the answer to that question which eludes me.

WHAT I DO know, is that this town, reminiscent of San Francisco — but unlike Bagdad-by-the-Bay, off the beaten tourist path — warrants more than a casual look.

For one, this is the Japan few western tourists see.

Nagasaki and other towns, resorts and parks on scenic Kyushu, however, are popular with Japanese from other corners of the land and with visitors from other countries in the region; therefore, there is an abundance of fine hotels, shops, restaurants and other facilities.

IN MY estimation, Japan's oldest port makes for an excellent base from which to take in such nearby attractions as Unzen National Park, Japan's first. I've been in the park during the fall and winter and, frankly, I cannot say which time I favor: it looked magnificent both seasons.

Also the hot springs of Furuyu, Shinyu and Kojogoku, better known by the collective name of Unzen Spa. And Shimabara, a charming castle town at the foot of Mount Unzen. I would also include Kumamoto, a town of many parks and wooded areas and a handsomely restored castle almost 400 years old.

ANOTHER great spot on Kyushu — one better known to North Americans because it is one of the terminals of the popular Inland Sea cruises — is Beppu, a lovely coastal town whose many hot springs and institutes of balneology (therapeutic bathing) make it Japan's leading spa. While many come here seeking cure for arthritis and other ailments, as many or more drop by for the sheer pleasure of soaking in the soothing hot waters surrounded by flowers, lush gardens and, yes, palm trees.

IN NAGASAKI, the principle sights include Oura Catholic Church, an officially designated national treasure that is the country's oldest wooden gothic edifice. Mentioned earlier, Glover Mansion is worth a stop for the view even if you are uninterested on how a 19th century British expatriate lived.

Dating back even earlier to the early 1600s, is Sofukuji Temple, an excellent example of 17th century Chinese architecture that is also a national treasure. A monument, a museum and a memorial sanctuary stand at the site of the Martyrdom of the Twenty-six Saints, the place where six foreign and 20 Japanese Christians were crucified in 1597 when the then military ruler banned their religion from the land.

THE MOMENT of Nagasaki's atomic holocaust is preserved at Peace Park, near the city's main train station. A pillar marks the epicentre of the blast, and at the International Cultural Hall, a museum displays chilling reminders — torn household utensils, burned clothing, photographs etc. — of the tragedy.

GAS-SWITCHING RILES U.S. BODY

WASHINGTON (WP) — Armed with a new study showing that as many as 15 per cent of the post-1974 car owners on the road have used or illegally are using cheaper leaded gasoline in their cars, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is considering a fine against motorists who switch fuels.

According to Ben Jackson, an EPA Acting Deputy Administrator, the fines are anly one action the agency is considering. However, any EPA attempt to influence fuel pricing will be criticized by the Department of Energy, which has endorsed total deregulation of motor gasoline at the pump.

The new developments at EPA are just the latest round of a disagreement between that agency and DOE over the cause and effects of fuel switching. When DOE first proposed gas deregulation, the EPA contended that the price differential between unleaded and leaded gasoline would grow larger than it has already become, thus causing more people to switch to the cheaper leaded gasoline. This in turn would pollute the air with lead.

EPA officials have contended that gas stations in some parts of the country are charging as much as 10 cents a gallon more for unleaded gasoline than leaded. Whenever a motorist puts leaded gasoline in a car that must, by federal law, take unleaded fuel, the gas station owner is subject to a fine of up to $10,000, but the driver is not subject to any fine.

According to the EPA some 40 gas station owners have been hit with fines averaging $1,000. In many cases, the agency contends, the switch occurs at a self-service pump, which is virtually unwatchable by the station owner.

The new EPA study points out that switching "is found to be more prevalent in the Pacific region than in the East, in rural than in metropolitan areas, and among the younger, middle income, better educated segmets of the population."

Goodyear Kills Firestone 500 Retreads

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. has used recycled Firestone 500 steel-belted radial tires to build retread tires for sale to motorists, the company revealed Friday.

The company said it now has ordered its dealers not to sell any of the retreaded 500s. Last week, the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. agreed to recall 10 million of the controversial tires which have been determined to have a safety defect.

At the same time it was learned that critical points in the recall settlement were still being negotiated by Firestone nearly a week after the agreement was signed with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA).

The Goodyear retread problem came to light when the company called NHTSA to check on the status of such tires under the recall. The Goodyear telephone call to NHTSA raised new questions about how many 500s have been used in the huge retread market, and if such tires pose a safety hazard.

Goodyear produces about a half a million retread tires a year in a retread industry that sells nearly 30 million auto tires a year.

But industry sources say the number of steel-belted radials used for retreads is small, since such tires have been in the market for only a few years, and have a longer life cycle than traditional bias-ply tires.

Meanwhile, consumers have swamped Firestone dealers throughout the U.S. with queries in an effort to determine whether their tires qualify under the complicated recall.

Those that do qualify will get a brand new tire and free mounting and balancing from Firestone in exchange for their existing 500s.

The government noted Friday that consumers who returned their defective 500s prior to the recall announcement, and received only a pro-rated rebate, could receive another rebate for the amount they paid.

But Firestone has informed NHTSA that there are only some 400,000 Firestone 721 steel-belted radials — the tires used to replace the 500 — in its storerooms. Even if Firestone puts its plant employees on overtime, NHTSA spokesman Bob Cook said, it could take "the better part of a year" to replace all of the outstanding 500s.

Other firms that sold versions of the Firestone 500 under their own brand names, like Montgomery Ward, have not yet set up plans to handle the recall.

U.S. Japanese Seeking $3B

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — It's a dingy page in United States history, left out of most textbooks. But Japanese-Americans who spent the Second World War behind barbed wire fences in concentration camps insist the story can't be so easily forgotten.

To help jog memories, they are asking Congress for $3 billion to compensate them for the years they spent in the desolate camps.

Officials of the Japanese-American Citizens League say the size of the request is intended to raise eyebrows and make headlines.

They hope the headlines will tell those who never knew — and remind those who have forgotten — that 120,000 people of Japanese ancestry were imprisoned in 1942-46 as "national security risks" because of their heritage.

The same situation existed in Canada, largely on the West Coast.

The league officials say too few people know about executive order No. 9066, signed by President Franklin Roosevelt, that opened the way for the legal imprisonment of Japanese-Americans not charged with a crime.

"We hear so many people who didn't even know there was an evacuation," said Dr. Clifford Uyeda, league president. "Educating them is really our primary objective. Money, I always say, is secondary."

Sixth Human Torch Blazes In U.K.

PORTCHESTER, England (AP) — A middle-aged woman poured kerosene over herself and set it alight, Hampshire County police said Friday, reporting England's sixth human torch case this month.

They said the woman, whose name was not revealed, was in serious condition in a special burns unit at Salisbury.

"It would appear that it was a self-inflicted injury," said a police spokesman.

Five persons have died in Britain since Oct. 2, when British heiress Lynette Philips burned herself to death in Geneva.

On Wednesday a West Indian man soaked himself with kerosene in a Birmingham park and set himself on fire. Similar incidents Sunday and Monday took the lives of an unmarried mother at Bracknell, Berkshire, and a 55-year-old housewife at Couldsdon, south of London.

Last Friday, a Yorkshire coalminer and father of six set fire to himself in a garden shed.

On Oct. 4, Pamela Evans-Cooper, 54, a director of the Fortnum and Mason department store in London's Piccadilly, poured surgical alcohol over herself on the banks of the Thames at Windsor and died in the flames.

Mushrooms Kill 6

BELGRADE (Reuter) — Six persons died and six more were seriously ill in a hospital in the Yugoslav town of Bosnia after eating poisonous mushrooms, hospital off-cials reported. Many of the victims are children under the age of seven, the source said.

'An Inside Job'

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Two masked bandits clubbed a U.S. Navy paymaster, stole his keys and the combination to the safe of the top-secret submarine tender USS Dixon. Missing is a $207,000 payroll, and authorities say it looks like an inside job.

"It certainly looks at this time like an inside job," Lieut. Doug Rein, public affairs officer for the submarine base at Ballast Point on San Diego Bay, said Friday.

Ensign Brian John Bogart told FBI and navy investigators that two men wearing rubber masks and surgical gloves and armed with pistols and nightsticks broke into his quarters Thursday night.

They wanted his keys and the combination to the safe aboard the Dixon, which contained payroll money.

When he refused, Bogart told authorities the two men beat him up and he lost consciousness. When he awoke, he told authorities, his keys, the combination to the safe, and one of the masked men were gone.

Bogart, 23, was reported in stable condition with severe head injuries at Balboa Naval Hospital. The FBI said agents were unable to question him extensively because he has been sedated.

Bogart told authorities one of the bandits stayed at his quarters while the other apparently drove the 32 kilometres to where the Dixon is docked in San Diego Bay. Bogart said he called authorities shortly before dawn Friday after his guard left.

The Naval Investigative Service sealed off the ship and began questioning the 1,134 enlisted men and 44 officers aboard.

The Dixon, commissioned in 1971, supplies a group of nuclear-attack submarines at Ballast Point. It has been undergoing overhaul for the last six months, and hundreds of civilians visited the ship during that time, the navy said.

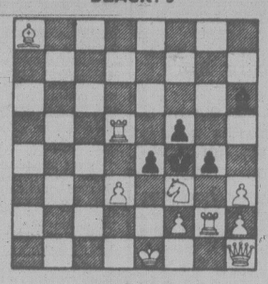

At a dockside news conference, Cmdr. Jack Mayo, 11th Naval District spokesman, said he could not explain how anyone could penetrate security at the base. He said the bandit would have needed a pass to enter the area.

"Whoever looted the safe was someone with a valid identification card which would have allowed them to get aboard the Dixon," Mayo said.

COMPUTERS ARE NOW CHESS MASTERS
During the Southwestern Open in San Antonio over Labor Day weekend, I was the commentator on the final three games of a famous match: David Levy, International Master of London, and the 4.7 computer. This was to settle a bet made ten years ago in which Levy wagered that no computer could beat him within a decade. The English Master won his bet, beating the machine 3½ to 1½ — but it was a close thing. In Game Three, 4.7 was doing quite well with the black pieces, when for no apparent reason whatsoever, it moved its King to KR1 which lost the game. In Game Four, the computer outplayed Levy and beat him in masterly fashion in 56 moves. In Game Five, 4.7 was doing very well when, all of a sudden, it went dead — and stayed dead for over an hour. As they were playing 40 moves in two hours of play, the computer lost on time! The 4.7 did so well that I am fully convinced that it will not take another ten years before computers will be ready for participation in international tournaments and, according to the Control Data Cyber Company, would have been available for the attack on Levy except for some minor lack of parts. The 5.1 is supposed to be a class stronger than the 4.7.

For those of you interested in getting a copy of the fourth game, in which the machine beat a master, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to George Koltanowski, P.O. Box 245, Kentfield, CA 94904.

Berster Planning Appeal

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Kristina Berster, who says she fled West Germany to avoid imprisonment, now faces a jail term in the United States, where she had hoped to start a new life.

Miss Berster, desscribed as a terrorist by the FBI, was convicted Friday on three felony and two misdemeanor charges for illegally entering the United States from Canada in July. Her lawyers said they will appeal.

A federal court jury deliberated five days before reaching its verdict, but did not accept Miss Berster's assertion that she was a victim of a repressive West German government.

The jury acquitted the 28-year-old woman and Ray Kajmir, 33, of New York City, on a conspiracy charge. Kajmir was accused of helping Miss Berster cross the U.S.-Canadian border July 16.

The defendant smiled at her lawyers after the conspiracy verdict was announced, but left the courtroom wiping tears from her eyes.

U.S. District Judge Albert Coffrin set no sentencing date. Miss Berster faces up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each felony count.

During the trial, she admitted walking across the border carrying a forged passport, but testified that she did so to find sanctuary.

At the time of her arrest, the FBI said Miss Berster was a suspected member of the West German Baader-Meinhof terrorist gang. The agency later said it had no evidence of the charge, but continued to view her as a terrorist.

Miss Berster testified that she travelled under an assumed name for five years after fleeing her native country, where she faces charges of associating with suspected terrorists.

Workers Return

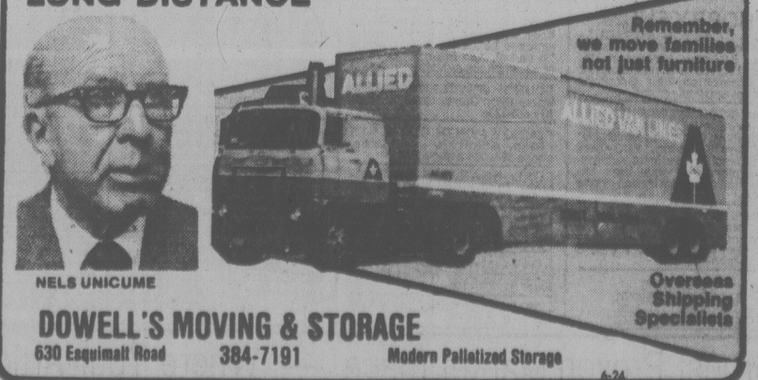

LONDON (AP) — Leaders of five labor unions agreed late Friday to end a six-week country-wide strike in Britain that closed six hospitals and severely reduced service at hundreds of others.

The union leaders, saying they were satisfied with a three-step approach to their demand for incentive bonuses for 3,500 striking engineers and supervisory workers, called for an immediate return to work. Details of the settlement were not disclosed.

It was expected to be several days before the hospital system recovers from the most damaging strike in the 30-year history of the government-run National Health Service.

The most significant element in the strike was a refusal by workers to service machinery, operate sterilizers or work in laundries.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service, eg. If you have a vacant room, etc., for rent or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Trade Boost Discussed

OTTAWA (CP) — Trade Minister Jack Horner and Soviet Foreign Trade Minister Nikolai Patolichev discussed ways of increasing trade in machinery and equipment as they opened two days of talks here Wednesday.

A trade department official said the two ministers talked mainly about "what we can do to get more substance into our trading relationship."

Canada exported $357.8 million in goods to the Soviet Union last year and about 80 per cent of it was grain. Imports from the Soviet Union amounted to only $55.3 million.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological forecast for Sunday, October 29 by SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on agreement, legal arrangement, partnership, cooperative effort, marital status. Permit one close to you to express views. You do much better now by listening rather than talking. Be aware of it and act accordingly. Cancer, Capricorn could figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Light touch wins. Task that has been hanging on is accomplished in atmosphere of conviviality. Gemini figures prominently. Accent on work, techniques, basic material, diet, persons who share your interests.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You gain through change; you lose if status quo dominates. The choice is your own. Someone wants to "trap" you. Key is to maintain balance and integrity. Your style, personal touch, personal magnetism dominate. You'll find where you stand with member of opposite sex.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You break through — you're capable now of getting message across to those who have earned your respect. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Family member confides, confesses, leans, seeks approval.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Reunion indicated with relative. Be diplomatic — don't force issues. You can win your way. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Short trips, messages, reports are part of agenda. You're presented with art object. Show appreciation without "gushing."

VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept. 22): Improve techniques, streamline procedures and you'll hike income potential. Pisces, Libra persons could figure prominently. See as is, not merely as you wish things could be. Accent on locating lost articles, protecting valuables, getting the most for your money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Push forward — make your mark. Numerical and lunar cycles at a peak. Take initiative. Make waves — and new starts in new directions. Stress personal appearance, personal appeal. Capricorn becomes an ally. You can build now for future security. Gamble — on you!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You gain advantage "out of the blue." Be confident; set aside secret fears, doubts. One, temporarily immobile, can provide a plan — and inspiration. Aries, Leo, Libra figure prominently. You have a secret ally — and admirer. Check the initials "I" and "R."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on gain through fresh contact, past investment, utilization of lessons learned in recent past. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. Yes, love is in picture — and you'll get chance to display creative capabilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You impress people now, not by revealing what is new, but by showing what is familiar. Message will be clarified. Cancer individual figures in important way. You can make career advance — you could also be selected as a civic or community spokesperson.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Distance, study, travel, communication with one who "adores" you — these are on agenda. Spiritual insight is spotlighted. You know where you want to go, but you are intrigued with alternatives. Pieces will fall into place. Yes, accept social invitation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Dig beneath superficial indications — pay dirt is available and you can reach it. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons figure in your personal scenario. Check banking facilities. Obtain best possible deal. Partner or mate is "financially involved."

IF OCTOBER 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are intuitive, a natural teacher, psychologist. You made new start this year — July was memorable. You'll travel, visit and socialize in November. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo persons play important roles in your life. You are due for greater happiness, financial security — and love.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, October 30 by SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Light touch wins. Don't force issues—or your views. Social event proves succesful. One who opposed you makes peace gesture. Be receptive. Gemini, Sagittarius figure promimently. Focus on expansion by preparing material, filing data, verifying legal rights and permissions.

TAURUS (April 20- May 20): Study Aries message. Maintain low profile. Collect factual information, delineate it and be sure others know you have it. This will avoid fruitless conflict, bluffing, stalling—and threats. Aquarius, Scorpio figure promimently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Creative juices flow; you feel more alive. Children, change, variety, speculation crowd your personal scenario. Virgo, Sagittarius—and another Gemini—Figure prominemftly. A "message" assures you that you get what is required.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Home life, security, gifts, relations with family members figure prominently. Be diplomatic, but firm. Time your moves. Teach and learn. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons are part of your personal scenario. Someone you respect pays meaningful compliment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hold off on final conclusions. Wait, listen observe—and display sense of humor. Avoid direct confrontation. Forces tend to be scattered. Element of luck is with you—but don't press it—Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept.22): Accent on possessions, investments, patience needed to wait for fruits of efforts. Older individual could be an ally. Utilize lessons learned in recent past. Capicorn figures in scenario—and so does number 8.

LIBRA (Sept.23-Oct. 22): You gain added recognition. Your figure is made more secure. Cycle is high—lines of communication open. You can sway, persuade and win a vital test of popularity, strength. Trust your own judgement. Aries individual; previously skeptical, becomes a "believer."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): What had been restricted is made available. Stick to beliefs, principles. Stress independence, originality. Assert views. Toss aside fear of unknown. Cycle moves up—you will be at right place at right time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on desire, friendship, fulfillment. An unorthodox individual could provide clue which ends a search. Aquarian figures prominently—and so does the number 11. One who taught you in past could make a reappearance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Barriers, obstacles are removed. You can advance, take steps up ladder. Gemini, Libra individuals figure in scenario. There will be reason to change routine, to celebrate. Third try will prove a charm.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar aspect coincides now with ability to communicate, educate and bridge distance and language barriers. You could find key to universal appeal. Scorpio, Taurus—and another Aquarian—could be part of scenario.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get involved—nothing is apt to be lukewarm. It is hot or cold, all or nothing. Know it and proceed accordingly. Gemini, Virgo—and the number 5—figure prominently. Relationship has entered "serious stage."

IF OCTOBER 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are more conscious of your physical appearance than the average person. You are recovering from emotional wound. You'll be "back to yourself" in December. Your most trying month this year was May. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. You are an artistic, complicated, sensitive individual. You are going to be happier—and you deserve to be.

NOVEMBER BIG SALE

starts Monday, October 30.
One week of big sale values!

Silk look polyester crepe de chine blouses . . . Eaton-exclusive value

(P1-1) Orient expression . . . with a Mandarin collar. More drama: full placket, single button cuff, shirred drop shoulder and back. In clay, rose, off-white, black. Sizes 10-18.

(P1-2) To make a point . . . this blouse has the new tiny pointed collar, 1 button cuff, raglan sleeve. Point? That clean, simple styling can be very feminine. Same colors and sizes as P1-1.

HALLELUJAH! ALCOHOLIC MILK

By JOE JOYCE
The Guardian

DUBLIN — It sounds like an old alchemist's dream come true. Millions of gallons of milk are being transformed into gin and vodka by a cheese factory in Ireland and distilleries in Britain.

Carbery Milk Products is now producing 3,000 gallons a day of 169 proof alcohol at its plant near Bandon, County Cork. It sells it all to distilleries and pharmaceutical companies in Britain.

Dairy scientists have known how to produce alcohol from milk for a long time, but the Carbery plant is the first in the world to turn it into a commercial reality.

The process, however, offers little scope to amateur distillers equipped with a few pints of milk. Huge quantities of milk and sophisticated equipment are needed for the transformation.

The alcohol comes from whey, the liquid mixture of cream, protein and lactose left over after making cheese. The Carbery factory uses equipment similar to kidney machines to extract the protein and then ferments the lactose to produce alcohol.

Bernie Cahill, the firm's managing director, said that the alcohol can be used in any spirits, like gin and vodka, which can be made from molasses.

Clocks Go Back

Daylight saving time officially ends at 2 a.m. local time Sunday and everybody should turn their clock back one hour before they go to bed Saturday night.

"Spring forward, fall back," is the catch-phrase some people use to remember the right way to reset their clocks.

Dow Rout Total

By JACK EGAN
Washington Post

NEW YORK — The stock-market finished the week in a total rout, continuing the broadest extended decline that analysts can remember.

Friday's drop of 15.07 in the Dow Jones Industrial Average put the week's loss at 31.96 points to close at 806.05.

For the last two weeks, the decline totals 91.04 points, or a retreat of more than 10 per cent.

"People are taking out their record books to see if there is anything worse in such a short period of time, and it's hard to find anything," said Newton Zider, vice president for market research at E.F. Hutton. "To have two weeks back to back like this is probably unprecedented."

While the declining 30 Dow Industrials has been demoralizing, they have outperformed the rest of the market, which has seen about 10 times as many stocks dropping as advancing.

Friday, on a turnover of 39.4 million shares, only 375 issues gained on the New York Stock Exchange while 1,480 stocks declined.

The market has been dogged with worries over the plunging dollar, rising inflation and surging interest rates for the last two weeks.

But analysts are attributing the continued descent in stock prices — with only one advance in the last 10 sessions — to technical factors more than to the sour news background.

The severe damage to the so-called secondary stocks, or companies with smaller capitalizations, is apparently continuing because customers who bought the shares on debt are getting margin calls from their brokers. And instead of putting up extra money, they are selling out their positions, adding to the downward pressure on prices.

TALKS COLLAPSE

Strike Closes B.C. Railway

VANCOUVER (CP) — No trains were running on the government-owned British Columbia Railway after the collapse today of marathon contract negotiations aimed at ending a strike which began Friday night.

Union members set up picket lines at stations along the line Friday evening, but both sides continued negotiations until 5:30 a.m. PDT when negotiators for the joint council of railway unions rejected an average 8.64-per-cent wage increase.

No further talks have been scheduled.

At the conclusion of the 20½-hour bargaining session, council chairman Norm Farley of the plumbers' union said the impasse is caused by "an unrealistic management."

Mac Norris, B.C. Rail chief executive officer, said the company is puzzled by the rejection.

Norris said that although the last offer was an average 8.64-per-cent increase in a one-year contract, "for over half the employees the offer was in excess of 12 per cent."

The 12 per cent was offered to Teamsters and the Canadian Union of Transportation Employees as a means of catching up to the other unions in the joint council.

Norris said money is the main stumbling block, and that management sees to problem with other issues.

He said the wage offer was tabled Wednesday, but the unions concentrated on settlement of other areas during discussions through the week.

Farley said the strike was called Friday evening with passing of a 48-hour union deadline set Wednesday when the company tabled two items the council felt should have been discussed at prior talks involving individual unions, rather that at the joint session.

"The council constitution written by the labor relations board says we're not empowered to deal with any items peculiar to any council constituents," Farley said. He would not disclose the issues or unions affected.

The joint council concept is being tested for the first time this year in an attempt to bring labor peace to the troubled railway. Less than a year ago, the provincial labor board wrote the constitution for the joint council.

The seven railway unions have been without a contract since July 31.

Labor Minister Allan Williams intervened in the dispite last week when it appeared the parties were deadlocked. He withdrew government mediator Fred Geddes from the bargaining, making a strike legal, but insisted that talks continue.

Geddes, working in an unofficial capacity, met separately with the two sides during negotiations Friday night.

Poison Water Threat

PENTICTON (CP) — Federal environment protection service (EPD) officers are investigating a leak of highly-toxic chemicals near a river channel flowing into two lakes which supply drinking water for this Okanagan city.

Peter Beulah, vice-president of Greenwood Forest Products Ltd., said Friday that an estimated 1.5 kilograms of liquid sodium pentachlorophenate, mixed 50 parts water to one part chemical, leaked from a holding tank which was filled earlier in the week.

The chemical is a form of pentachlorphenol (PCP) which has been linked to birth defects, cervical cancer and deaths.

Beulah said the leak was discovered Friday morning. He said use of the tank was halted and that it was being drained to determine the cause if the leak.

Lynda Gauthier, pollution control branch spokesman, said EPS had been asked to handle clean-up and investigation of the leak.

Otto Langer, EPS hazardous waste biologist, said even the diluted solution used by Greenwood — and many other forest products firms — could kill fish in neaby Skaha Lake if it travels that far.

"PCP is highly toxic to aquatic life and fairly persistent in the environment," he said.

"I didn't think of calling any health people or environment officials because I was too busy ordering the tank drained and I didn't think only 100 gallons of the stuff would be a danger," said Beulah.

Post Office Flashpoint Remains

Times News Services

The situation in the post office remains at flashpoint across Canada today with suspensions of Canadian Union of Postal Workers leaders in several centres and skirmishes between union members and people who worked during the week-long mail strike reported in Toronto.

Three shop stewards have been suspended indefinitely in Vancouver because of their actions during the week-long defiance of back-to-work legislation and, in Halifax, an undisclosed number of postal employees have been suspended "pending a recommendation for dismissal."

Buz Sawyer, post office spokesman in Victoria, said today there have been no confrontations nor suspensions involving CUPW members here.

He said the hard feelings generated by the week-long strike have given way to hard work.

"Everyone is doing his best to do the job."

Sawyer also took exception to reports supervisors were taunting CUPW members.

"I can assure you nothing of that kind is going on here. That would be a just plain dumb thing to do."

Lloyd Ingram, president of the CUPW's Vancouver local, said the union will "put on all the pressure we can" to stop further suspensions but he would not say what action would be taken.

Ingram said the three stewards could lose their jobs if they don't win planned grievances.

Post office spokesperson Betty Amos also said that delivery of summonses to 31 union members in the Vancouver area were held up after only three or four had been served.

The post office has been informed by the federal justice ministry that "there is a hold on any more summonses or prosecutions, not that they (current charges) are dropped," she said.

The 31 were charged in provincial court with defying return-to-work legislation after information was filed in court by post office supervisors.

Meanwhile, the 19,000 members of the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada who reported back to work Thurs-

A Real SIN, Says MP

OTTAWA (CP) — A Conservative MP said Friday the government is abusing the use of social insurance numbers and a cabinet minister answered he is suffering from paranoia.

Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon-Biggar) said in the Commons the government is violating undertakings of many years standing that it would use the numbers for only social services.

He said in an interview later this is an invasion of the privacy of individuals. He said individuals can become the victims of fraud if their numbers get widespread dissemination.

He likened the unlimited use of the number to George Orwell's 1984 in which the government kept close check on citizens.

And he said it has been said if Hitler had the information obtainable through unrestricted use of such numbers he could have murdered more Jews.

Hnatyshyn raised the matter in the Commons by asking Health and Welfare Minister about extension of the use of the number by provinces and the federal govedrnment to that of a glorified identification card.

Miss Begin said she does not understand the paranoia behind the question. She was responsible for a department with an annual budget of $14 billion. It was a vulnerable field, open to the danger of fraud. Use of the numbers by all governments in their computer programs provided a measure of control of use of the money.

"I dont intend to let people cheat on any penny of the money . . .I don't want any loss of control."

ICBC Strike Backed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Union members employed by the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia Friday voted 82 per cent to strike if necessary to get a new contract, spokesmen for the Office and Technical Employees Union said.

The last contract expired Sept. 30.

Major outstanding issues include wages and hours of work, the spokesmen said. ICBC has offered a general pay increase of five per cent to a maximum of $1,000 a year. The union wants 9.5 per cent, they said.

ICBC also has offered merit bonuses of up to $1,000 a year.

Carter Pulls Egyptians Back to Peace Table

Times News Services

Egypt today reversed its decision to recall its negotiators from Washington, giving the U.S.-backed peace conference a major new boost.

President Carter told a campaign rally in Buffalo, N.Y., he had phoned Egyptian President Anwar Sadat Friday and asked him to reconsider the move to summon home his principal two delegates to the talks.

"I'll do what my friend Jimmy Carter asks me to," Carter quoted Sadat as replying. "They're going to stay there and negotiate."

Meanwhile, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan today rejected suggestions that peace talks with Egypt had reached a crisis stage.

The Egyptian decision to keep its negotiators in Washington came as the Carter administration worked to prevent a dispute over Israel's announced intention to expand settlements on the West Bank of the Jordan River from becoming an obstacle to completion of the peace treaty.

Israeli Prime Minister Megachem Begin's cabinet revealed that intention Wednesday in a move that triggered a sharp public clash with the Carter administration.

Egypt, sensitive to concern in the Arab world about the future of the two areas, wants to strengthen the language linking the West Bank issue to an Eyptian-Israeli peace.

Israel, which contends that the two matters are separate, seeks to weaken the linkage language.

In the last 48 hours, U.S. officials have made little secret of how angry they are at Begin for making the settlements an issue at this stage of the talks.

As the talks were moving into a holding pattern, President Carter met with Saudi Arabia's King Khalid at a White House luncheon in an effort to win his backing for the peace drive launched at Camp David.

A statement issued afterward said Khalid appreciates Carter's peace efforts — indicating the king still is unwilling publicly to endorse the Arab-Israeli talks.

Britain Arms Zambia

LUSAKA (Reuter) — A British military transport plane carrying a first consignment of military equipment to shore up Zambia's defences flew in and out of Lusaka early today.

Informed sources said the operation was carried out amid tight security to avoid a possible Rhodesian attack or harassment.

No details of what the plane was carrying were immediately available. But the sources indicated that anti-aircraft guns were likely to be in the consignment.

More British military flights are expected during the weekend.

President Kenneth Kaunda first asked for British military assistance when he met Prime Minister James Callaghan last month in Kano, Nigeria.

Two teams of British military experts visited Zambia to assess the landlocked country's needs but the shipments were accelerated by last week's Rhodesian raids in Zambia.

This is a 20 per cent increase from the same period during 1977.

Shoot 'em Down . . . Send 'em Bill

MOSCOW (WP) — The Soviet Union, which shot down a South Korean airliner last April after it strayed into Russian airspace, has charged the Koreans about $100,000 for humanitarian aid to the 108 passengers and crew who survived the high-altitude attack and crash landing.

The bill, prepared several months ago, charges South Korean Airlines for food, medical help and transportation for people and baggage from the remote frozen lake were the pilot of the stricken airliner managed to land after the plane was hit.

The Soviets refuse to diplomatically recognize South Korea and have sent the bill to Pan American World Airways, which has acted as general representative for the Korean company here. A Pan American spokesman refused to comment, but senior Soviet diplomatic sources confirmed that the bill had been sent and so far has not been paid.

Other sources said the Soviet authorities in their accounting "reserve the right for other charges not contemplated in the original bill."

One Western diplomatic source, informed of the soviet action, said, "they probably included the cost of the gas for the fighters and the machinegun bullets, too."

The Boeing 707 jetliner was intercepted by two Soviet fighters as it blundered on the night of April 20 over the strategic city of Murmansk, home port for the Soviet ballistic missile submarine fleet.

The fighters signaled the airliner to land, and when it ignored them, one interceptor fired on the plane with missiles after machinegun bullets were fired in warning across its nose. The attack, at 35,000 feet, punctured the passenger cabin with shrapnel, killing two and injuring 10. The 707 pilot, Kim Chang Kyu, headed the plane into a dive to prevent fatal decompression of the passenger compartment and subsequently landed about 30 miles west of the small Soviet city of Kem on the defence-studded Kola Peninsula.

Among the items listed by the Soviets were the cost of helicoptering the survivors from the wilderness landing site to Kem; three days of food and care there, where they were confined to a town community centre; bus rides to the city airport; and the flights of two Aeroflot jetliners from Kem to Murmansk with the passengers and baggage for eventual return to the West via a Pan Am 727, the clipper "West Berlin."

Good Shepherds Struggling

Screwball, Chubby and Dirty Face peered out at me.

The furry three were new arrivals yet it was almost as if somehow they realized the plight of Mother Cecilia and Sister Julia and the two or three helpers who keep the Good Shepherd Shelter in Mill Bay struggling along.

Few humans probably realize their plight and fewer still know just what a struggle it has been lately.

I found out when a reader sent me a copy of a rather sad report from the Shelter recently. More people, at least those who care for animals, should be aware of what's happening, the reader suggested, and perhaps be able to do something.

What's happening is that the haven for lost and unwanted animals which the two nuns have run — at first in Saanich, then Metchosin and finally in Mill Bay — for nearly 20 years, is broke.

"Right now, we have 293 abandoned dogs at the shelter, all known by name and character," the report

max low

said. "As well, we have 11 long-term dog boarders, 20 horses (many of which were saved from being made into dog food), nine goats, a boarding pig (which is bigger than my double bed!), numerous cats and kittens, approximately 200 chickens, various geese, ducks, guinea hens, rabbits, hamsters, a boarding monkey and a chinchilla."

Plenty of animals but no money.

"At the end of August, we can report that we now have about $50 in the bank," the report said. "Wages have been kept down as best we can; it is now we want to ask mercy for the animals."

What the nuns do have, of course, is plenty of faith.

"Let us now turn to our Father in Heaven and place our petitions," they said. "Dear Lord, You ask us to care for the animals. This we have tried to do. We long to carry out your request. We turn to You in our plea for the animals. Help us to help them . . ."

The report, plus pages of the last editorials to be penned by Mother Cecilia, contained even more heart-rending prose and was to have been sent to some 3,000 animal lovers on the shelter's mailing list. But the mail strike didn't help.

"We only got about 700 sent out before it hit us," Sister Julia told me when I called in the other day. "Still, those who did receive it sent in $10 to help out instead of maybe $5.

"We have been able to meet the salaries (there are usually four or five part-time workers headed by Irene Pabsdorf looking after the animals) but we haven't been able to pay a big bill at the feed ... nor the veterinarian.

"We're just sort of living from day to day ... hoping that something will happen."

THEIR BIG NEED IS COLD CASH

What has happened is that Mother Cecilia — the maverick nun who 20 years ago next March took in Chris, the first of her horde of dogs, and then defied the Vatican by devoting the rest of her life to looking after animals instead of people — turned 90 in May. Though she was up for her birthday, she's bedridden now and very frail and is unable to continue with her writing.

That chore, as well as many others, has been taken over by Sister Julia, a self-confessed sports fan ("specially baseball") who insists though, that Mother Cecilia is still in control.

"She has over-worked over the years and this has caused a physical weakness but it's only physical," explains Sister Julia, who has been with the shelter since it started and with Mother Cecilia for 23 years. "I still go to her for all the business decisions."

Over the years, Mother Cecilia has faced her share of criticism for running what is believed to be the only animal shelter in Canada and perhaps the only one in the world that doesn't put animals to sleep but finds homes for about 50 per cent of them and gives the others a home there until they die naturally.

"There are people who find fault with us because we do not put some of the animals to sleep in order to reduce the number and work," she said in a recent editorial.

"The family of animals was brought here because they were destitute and not wanted. If animals can think that way, they must feel they have entered Heaven. Some of them have seen cruelty and starvation. Should it end with murder, do you think?"

Ironically, the report that went out stressed not only a shortage of money but a need for more volunteer help, yet what the shelter got was more animals!

"Animals have been pouring in since the report," said Sister Julia.

And, because the shelter is the only one of its kind, pet lovers who have to part with their pet but can't bear the thought of having it put to sleep, send it to Mill Bay — no matter how far away they live.

"People who don't want their pets destroyed know they'll be looked after here and so they send them," Sister Julia explained.

"Look in here, these cats are all from Ontario," she said, opening a door to a room where 20 or so are under observation. "These cats are from Quebec," she added as we moved on to a cottage where a dozen or more females were waiting to be spayed before being allowed to roam the 58-acre property.

And then, as we moved through the centre of a huge barn housing the dogs, I met three of the most beautiful huskies you've ever seen, flown down from the Northwest Territories because their owner could no longer keep them yet didn't want them to die.

Yes, you guessed it ... Screwball, Chubby and Dirty Face.

Inner Harbor Proposal Forces Empress Hotel To Stall On Expansion

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The Empress Hotel has shelved plans to expand its own convention facilities, manager Ted Balderson has revealed.

His announcement came after plans were made public for a proposed convention centre on the Inner Harbor.

The proposal for a trade and exhibit complex on the Reid site, includes a 16,000 square foot convention hall.

Balderson said the proposed facility could handle convention banquets of upwards of 1,200 people.

By contrast, the largest meeting hall in The Empress — the Crystal Ballroom — is 6,000 square feet and has a maximum banquet capacity of 500.

"Our plan to expand the Crystal Ballroom has been placed on the back burner," Balderson said.

"There will be no action on it this year and maybe not for a long time.

"The new convention centre would not be direct competition for The Empress. We would complement each other," he said.

"We would still host small conventions and would provide (sleeping) rooms for people coming to the larger convention hall."

If the new convention hall becomes a reality, The Empress will specialize in conventions in the range of 200 to 500 while the new hall will attract most meetings larger than that.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf this week outlined a proposal to ask private enterprise to construct the $5 million trade and exhibit complex on provincial government waterfront property.

The provincial government would donate the land and Victoria city would pay for a 250-car underground parking facility.

Bawlf said he would recommend that a trade and convention bureau be formed to lease and operate the convention hall.

This job likely would fall to the Visitors Information Centre, which operates the Causeway tourist office.

Balderson, who is also president of the Visitors Information Centre, said the Bawlf plan could give Victoria the type of organized convention marketing that is available in larger centres.

"The Visitors Information Centre is the logical group to form the trade and convention bureau. The last thing Victoria needs is another new group to get involved in the tourist business. This is something that we (the VIC) should logically be handling.

"We would like to obtain further information on the proposal and discuss how we can help."

Balderson said Edmonton pays for its convention deficits through its business tax.

When convention marketing was proposed there, the city's business tax was increased to 11 per cent from 10 per cent, with the extra money earmarked to support convention operations.

"They had a good-sized fund in the bank before they started. This is something we should look at for Victoria."

In addition to the convention hall, the proposed complex would contain 45,000 square feet of retail space, including a centre offering seafood, fresh produce and food specialities and more than an acre of open space for plazas, promenades and roof gardens.

Mayor Mike Young said he will recommend to city council it approve the plan.

Batvan Blitz Starts

The first night of a weekend, province-wide blitz on drinking drivers netted three impaired motorists in the Greater Victoria area.

A police spokesman said four other motorists were handed 24-hour suspensions as officers stopped close to 800 vehicles Friday night in a series of roadblocks concentrated mainly in the Esquimalt and Saanich areas.

The Breathalyzer Analysis Testing (BAT) van is out again tonight but police are not saying where.

This weekend all 17 BAT vans in the province are being put into service in one of three concentrated attacks organized under the attorney-general ministry's Counter Attack program.

The other two blitzes are scheduled for the weekends starting March 16 and May 25.

Road checks, which have been operated throughout the year in the Greater Victoria area will be stepped up in December with greatest emphasis on the period between Christmas and New Year.

Panama Flats Farming Stirs Residents' Fears

Saanich residents who live overlooking the Panama flats are worried that extensive farming of the property may eventually result in the loss of a valuable wildlife habitat and affect Colquitz Creek.

The 50-acre property was sold a month ago to Saanich alderman and farmer Geoff Vantright.

It was formerly owned by William Edge, of Carey Road.

The Vantreights are digging holding ditches to drain the land and to conserve water during the summer months. One of the ditches is located close to Colquitz Creek.

Panama Flats is a flood plain in the winter months and during this period it's a refuge for geese and all species of marsh birds.

It's also a favorite skating area during freeze-ups.

A federal fisheries spokesman said they were concerned at first that sediment from one water holding ditch would escape into Colquitz Creek but were assured that this would not happen.

"However, we have warned the owners that this must not happen," he said.

Dr. Robert Langford, an environmental biologist for Saanich, said he does not believe the ditches will affect the birds in winter.

However, some residents think the ditches will eventually effect the ecology of the area and they're disappointed that Saanich did not buy the land.

Neil West, of Carey Road, said people were given to understand that the land would be bought by Saanich.

"All of a sudden it is sold," he said.

"Council never announced it had an offer to buythe property. We were kept in the dark."

Edge said he offered the land to Saanich for use as a park or greenbelt area but was turned down.

"They said they had no use for it and no money as well," Edge said.

Edge said he farmed only part of the land up to a few years ago then rented it to a dairy farmer.

Arkell Seeks Seat On Board

A Burnside parent who wants to see better co-ordination of counselling services in the schools, improved libraries and greater emphasis on long-term planning has thrown his hat in the ring for one of five seats on the Greater Victoria school board.

Arkell joins Winfield Mott, a Capital Region District employee, in challenging incumbents Susan Brice, Peter Dorazio, Bud Smith and Peter Yorke in the Nov. 18 elections. The fifth incumbent, Dr. Mark Fisher, has not yet said whether he'll run again.

Arkell, a bookkeeper for Cigas, has been active at both Burnside and S.J. Wills schools. He represented Burnside elementary parents last spring in board hearings on plans to close down the school.

In Sooke, too, a contest is looming, with the entry of Don Stansall in the Milne Landing zone held by incumbent school board chairman Horst Doniecki who will be trying for a fourth term.

The other Sooke incumbent Irene Lane is undeclared. If she runs she will face at least two opponents, Roy Holder, 31, of Langford and Leif Wergeland, 37, of Colwood.

In the Saanich school district incumbents Gerry Kristianson and Walter Tangye announced Friday their intentions to run again.

Crash Driver Charged

Five people were hurt when a speeding car being chased by police hit another car head-on early today on King George Terrace.

Oak Bay police said a charge of dangerous driving has been laid against Thomas Frederick Ward, 20, of 2610 Beach Drive, the driver of one of the cars.

He is in fairly good condition in Royal Jubilee with injuries to his jaw and chin.

The driver of the other car, Martin Naucler, 18, of 1918 Wenman, and three passengers, Cameron Anderson, 18, Lorraine Leon, 16, and Brian Kaiser, 18, were treated and released.

Gov't Shares Gag Ad Bill

The ad in the Seattle paper said: Hurry! Come to Cowichan Bay — before the provincial government lets private industry destroy it.

The funny part is the provincial government shared the costs of the ad.

Among those still trying to see the funny side is Ted Grigg, the Vancouver representative of the Post-Intelligencer, who approved it.

"I didn't realize the ad was a joke when I sent it to Seattle," Grigg said in an interview today.

"There was a whole bunch of ads and it was a big rush. And I didn't know anything about the Cowichan estuary controversy — but I sure do now!"

The incident began when the provincial government urged anyone in the tourist business to participate in a special B.C. advertising section in the Seattle paper. Companies were told to phone Grigg's number in Vancouver.

The Cowichan Estuary Preservation Society decided, as a joke, to offer an advertisement attacking government policy.

Ann Holden, spokesperson for the group, said she was surprised but delighted when the ad was accepted.

Grigg was on the other end of the phone.

"I was really busy and the ad read: Hurry-Hurry-Hurry! Come to Cowichan Bay. It seemed to be all right so I sent it through."

But the ad continues: "The B.C. government is considering allowing industry to continue to spread in this important, valuable estuary, thus destroying the very thing you, as a tourist, may be seeking."

The ad was one of a number placed above a large provincial government advertisement on the Capt. Cook bicentennial festival.

Grace McCarthy, who developed the co-op tourist ad program, is out of town and unavailable for comment.

Michael Powell, spokesman for the government's ad agency, McKim Advertising Ltd., said the company did not see the ad before it went to Seattle.

LOST TROLLER STILL SOUGHT

A search for the 28-foot troller Neptune — believed to have left Port Hardy on Saturday with owner Bill Carson and another couple aboard — is continuing over a wide area of the B.C. coastline.

A spokesman for the RCMP in Port Hardy said searchers are concentrating on two areas, around Powell River and in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

"The problem is we just don't know where they went," the spokesman said.

A friend of Carson, however, said Carson and the couple left in the Neptune to fish at Shushartie Bay in Goleta Channel near Bull Harbor.

The friend went to Shushartl Bay and after failing to find the vessel, notified search and rescue authorities.

The spokesman said every harbor between Vancouver and Prince Rupert has been checked and every area and island given an air search at least twice.
